The Wild Man of the Navidad.—The Wild Man of the Navidual was cold at public ruction in Victoria, Texns recently. He was bid off by Mr. P. Bickford it $207. Junbo dal not the the idea of being conflued to the narrow lladits of a planfation, or to have his freedom houmled in, any way; so he concluded to try his hand at hving again in the woods, and left his new master after a few hours' acquaintance with him. Mr. B. was very kind to Jimbo, but the ingrateful wild man would not reciprocate his musfer's effection, and is now muning at large, perhaps again to become an object of wonder and curiosity to those who are fond of the marvellous.

There is but fittle doubt that Jimbo is the identical wild man of the Navidad. He was seen in 1837 by a gentleman who has given such a faithful description of him that no reasonalds doubt now remains as to his identity. At that time there were three of the negroes—limbo, his wife, and a negro man. The woman and man have since drell, as it is supposed, and Jimbo alone remains. They ere supposed to hare been imported into Taxas by Monroe-Edwards, but escaping from him have lived duoe in the woode up to the captum of Jimbo, in November Lad.

leats of necromancy in New York, on the evening of the 14th instant. The Post thus describes some of his manipulations:

It would be difficult to describe these experiments at length, but we may say that many of them were of a novel end extraordinary character. Those which as the most curious, were the teesbeastible hottle, which fernishes liquors and wines enough, of all kiads, to sapply a company of reterned Californians for a dey, to say a obling of occasional glasses of soda water, milk, and epsom esits, which were ported from it as the acdlenge required. But the most wonderful part of this trick was, that the bestle was knoken, and found to coatain only two pocket hendkerchiels belonging to some ladies of the company. Yet, there was a hat, taken from a gentlagaan, which was as much of a born of plenty as the bottle, for it gave fouth endless qeantities of bon-boes, bauquets, in cups, sed, last of all, feathers enough, the moke a deable bed. Seven half-dolfars, collected from persons present, were placed in a box, which was locked, end committed to the care of one of the spectators, but speedily made their appearance, one by one, in a transparent lox, which, at techel to two long, slender strings, hung from the ceiling, vibrating slowly over the liends of the audience. A vass of ink was terned into water, end water was turned into ink; "inocent gold-fish were mede to dingorge rings which, the numment before, had hen lired out of epistol; end e multitude of pocket landkerchiefs, gathered promiseuously round the room, were thrust into a basin and washed, taken, out soaking, burnt to ciuders over a spirit lemp, and then found neatly ironed and done up in a box which he also do eno an isolated table all the while. Again, a gentleman deposited six watches, helonging to different, members of the audience, in a hox, which he locked, and held on his head for safety, but at the report, of a pistol, it was found that they had escaped from their biding ploce, and were hanging from the bottom, of the chair on which he

Walking home from a soiree at the West-effd through Regent street, Haumankat and the Strand, onc at states that I was atruck, though scoutsomed to all manner of late hours in New York, with the relative activity and wide-awake aspect of London at the thour. It seemed the High Change of revelry and pleasure-seeking. The taveres, the clubs and drinking-shops betrayed acquiputoms of drowsiness; the theatres were barely beginning to emit their jaded multitudes; the cahe and private carriages were more plectiful than by day, and were briskly wheeling huedreds from party to party; even the omniboses rattled down the wide atreets as treshly and almost as a umerously as at mid-day. The policemen were alert on early every corner; sharpers and saspicious characters atepped nimbly about the cross atreets, in quest of prey, and innumerable wrecks of womanhood, God pity tham! shed a deeper darkaess over the shaded and dusky lanes and byways wheeles they momentally emerged to salote the passer-by. Beneath the shelter of hight, interry stole forth from its squalld lair, no longer awed by the police, to beseech the compassion of the stranger, and pour its tale of wo and suffering into the rarely willing ear. Yesterday, the Bull Circus of Araibez became the theatre of a speciacle worthier of the age of the Romaea of the empire, than of the 19th century. Several wild heasts were introduced successively to light in the arene. The Queer-Mother and her family, together with the King sad Duke of Kianzares were present in the royal hox. The first fight was between a wolf and several dogs. The wolf lorked at first excessively frightened, and made severel leaps to clear the lofty iron grating which surrounded the arens. These efforts became desperate when lie saw bound into the circus-four powerful dogs, which in a faw moments reduced him to such a pittful state that it was necessary to withdraw him. The wolf stool on the defensive he shook off the dogs, but he did not utteck them. Next cutered a hyens, against which four dogs were likewise loosed. One of the lings distinguished himself greatly in this combat, and several times mastered the hyena alone, dragging thin over the ground, but ha was ac punished by the flerce hite of the wild beast, thet his master wes fair to enter the arens and withdraw him from the combat, amid selvos of applause. The public now loudly called for the mitepid who hed insuled the hyena. This was the first of the pack who dared to seize the hear with his teeth. The others initiated his exumple with less pluck, but no elfect seemed to be produced by any of the assailents upon the shaggy beost, and the bravest of them seemed baffeld by the thickness of his coat, which defied the gripe of his adversaries. The last ect of the spectacie, was that which had unore particularly attacted crowds by railroad to Aranjaez. The fight was now between a lion and a hull. The first was one of the feest of his species. Buenos Ayres.—The news from the Argentine Republic, in South America, ie most gloomy. It is one of the very finest portions of thet, continent, and above all others it has been a prey to civil wars. First came the "secossion" of Paraguey; then that of Montevideo, and now the news is folly confirmed of the secession of two more States, Corientes and Entre Rios. Brazil has essumed a decidedly hostile ntitude, and aids the secession is its, though not yet to point of open war. How all this will end, or how a pacificution can be restored, one cannot forcees. It will be remembered that the force of Rosan was strong enough to bear up against the ossibilited nival forces of England, and Prance. The Buenos Ayres people also coulty drove a large British laud torce from their uity early in the present century. On the other, hand, much feeldeness has been shown by Rosas, in this insubility to subdue the Montevidous, and to bring lack the province of Paraguay. The two provinces now seceding, Entre Ross and Corientes, occupy an important place in that confederation. They are on great rivers of the country, and adjacent to Brazil, whose, imperial government is openly disposed to make the most, in its own fewer, of the internal troubles of its repeblican neighbors. The whole aspect of the matter forchodes much evil to commerce, and to the welfare end improvement of the Argeetine Confederation.

Q. 4. When the matters involved in the bill of charges presented against a local preacher, in whole, or any mate rial part, are pending before a civil or eriminal court, ie it ueage to lay the case over till the court trial is had?" A. It is the ueage to lay such osses ever until the trial ie decided in the civil or oriminal court. There is no oxpress rule of discipline governing this case; but it is believed, like the common law of the land, to be founded in commen-sense and common justice, as the interests of the acoused and the ende of justice might be affected by a church triel under auch circumstances.

Q. 5. "When the members of a Quarterly Conference believe that the chargea presented against a local preacher can not be fully investigated until after the termination of suite pending befure civil tribunals, has the Quarterly Conference a right to adjourn the case until such period? and doce not the Presiding Elder whe peremptorily refueee to putthe legitimate powers of hie office?"

A. The Quarterly Conference, eitting in the judicial capacity, on the trial of a local preacher, has the right to postpono the case by adjournment, when in their judgment it cannot be fully investigated under existing circumstances, and to continue such postponement until the obstacles to such investigation are removed. The President of the Conference has no right, by virtue of his of fice, to refuse to put a motion, when made had seconded, for such an adjournment. It is coarcely necessary to state the danger of investing an individual with such power.

Q. 6. When two of more charges are presented against a local preacher, what is the proper node of presenting testimony? Is all the testimony, both against and in favor of the accused on set longe and prays for a better. all the charges and specifications, to be gene through with before any of the

"Now" gave I seventy nine I can perform the duties. It was a disease or a demon which of his Divine Master.

The fever seized him, however, in less than a week. I prucured an eminent physician; my wife and I nursed him. In eeventeen eummere that I've nursed among the eick, I do not think that I ever eaw a case so violent but it torminated in death, his only excepted. On the fourth day, generally the orieis, the burning fever was coursing through his veine, and drinking up his English blood. Hie skin burning, dry and yellow, heart sick, home-sick, allbound eick; and his apirits sunk down to his breels. I eat by his bedeide; he fastened his restless eyes on mine: - O, mr. I., nr. T., I shall die. I shall die.—I never oan eand this," and he threw his brawny arms across the bed, as if going to grapple with death. "Dlo," says I, "Robert, to be sure, we must all die; but you are not going to die thie week." In thie I spoke unadvisedly with my lips, but I thought of Pope Pius and hie Bull, to wit, that the end would sanctify the means. He was nuder the influence of powerful medicine at this moment; I knew there would be a lull, as the eailore say, soon; and I meant to take advantage of the circumetauce, to persuade to tago of the circumetauce, to persuade to the circumetauce, to persuade to the war, he is resolved to the committee and exhaustless exchequer no superiority of mind; for (added he) I accustom mycelf in my researchee to keep the euliect conctantly before me, say, soon; and I meant to take advantage of the circumetauce, to persuade to the circumetauce, to persuade the circumetauce, to persuade to the circumetauce, to persuade the circumetauce, to persuade the circumetauce, to persuade to the circumetauce, to persuade the circumetauce, to persuade to the circumetauce, to persuade the circumetauce the circumeta tago of the circumetauce, to persuade him to live, if possible. Fancy kills, and fancy cures. I left him for fifteen On my return I felt his pulee; said I, "Robert, you are fifty per cent. hetter already; I hope to see you walk from the bed, and eit by the window tomorrow." I sat by his bed conversing to cheer his epirits. I continued Death is nigh at hand at all timee and in all places; but my impression is, that you will not die with thie attack. I hope to eee you a thriving master build-er, married to one of the bonny Yankee lassies, and to hold your grandchild in my arms."

From this honr the fever left him. Shortly after this, the fever disappeared from the city. He became a master builder, and died in 1843, aged 56 But his name will never die, while types are set, and printers breathe. The Unspeakable Gift, ...

The doctrines of the incarnation and The doctrines of the incarnation and atonement, so infinitely dear to the Church, are not more bodiless abstractions of the schools. They are the nutriment of the closet and the analysis and the death bed. It is in them that a God of awful and insffable purity becomes accessible to a race revolted and corrupt. It is in the gift of his Son that God oommended his love to the world; and heaven itself, on the bestowment of a Relectmer, left in its own infinite and exhaustless exchequer no richer boon. He is the "unepeakable with a grant of the stown myeelf in my researchee to issue in the jostling and exposure of a ride or a visit, will conclude that what had cerved the unwearied diligence of his application. In him, richest benefit, shall be not with him "freely give us all things?" In him, the incarnato Deity has humanized itself, and made itself, so to speak, tangihle and intelligible, and approvable to humanity. We have, in the high-priest, one who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. And in this Christ, this divine embodiment of infinite love. thie divine embodiment of infinite love within a mortal tabernacle, the philosophy of the skies makes its direct and palpable appeal to the dullest and feeblest intellect. The child and the savage may not have the grasp of mind and patience of attention to follow out any long chain of argumentation, but bring the etory of Calvary before them, and every dormant powor of the soul is aroused. "Horein is love, not that we oved God, but that he first loved us." And stooping thus low, and coming the near, why should he be refused the heart he claime only that he may flood it with peace—"the peace of God that passeth all understanding?". Sir Isaao Newton was indisputably. one of the groatest philosophere the world over produced, and as his epitaph world over produced, and as his epitaph statee, may be regarded as the ornament of the human race. Yet he made no arrogant claims of deference, no his pretensions to enperiority. All his passions were under the strictest control, and he even ecemed the only person in company who was a stranger to his own wouderful attainments. In contemplating the intellectual qualities of this pre-eminent philosopher, we searcely know whether most to admire the depth of his penetration, the wide and almost to recover what he has lost by his grace-less journeying.

Our conclusion is, that a portable relieve worth having, and a pleasure ride, with a stay of a few wocks at some spring, notch or besch, will be found very useful in testing the question of personal ligion, finding that it will not stay by them, and that it is too sickly to endure the jostling and exposure of a ride or a of his penetration, the wide and almost the jostling and exposure of a ride or a

me that the provocation ought to be very great to justify the use of such opithets at are applied by it to the mode of Christian baptism contended for by our Baptist brethren, and admitted by us as valid. But I am no censor, and mersly throw ont this as a suggestion which may be of advantage to our Memohis brathren and their correspondents. I make the suggestion, too, with all deferences, and I trust in a Christian spirit.

A ride of forty miles, through a country bnrned np by the long drouth, brought us, covered and almost suffocetsd with dust, to the residence of my brother, near Somerville, Tenn.

The drouth through Wost Tennessee,
North Mississippi and North Alabama, has been excessively severe, and many poor people will suffer for the necessaries of life. In some counties they are in droad of a famine, and meetings of the citizens have been called to adopt measures to invostigate, as far as may be, the sufferings of the people. In many places the forest trees are dying, on account of the dry weather. Still I on account of the dry weather. Still I hope, in this land of such rich abnndance, the suffering will not be very general or excessive. More anon. Russells Valley, Aug. 23, 1851. R. H. R.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate Letter from Arkansas.

Dear Bro. McTyeire—Enclosed I send you the names of two new subscriber for the tr. O. Ohlbertan Advocate, and the money.

Your excellent paper comes regularly to this point, and is always a welcome visitor. I most heartily congratulative, and bid you God speed in your laudable enterprise—a thing so long and much desired at that point. And next to our own—the Memphis and Arkansas Christian Advocate—I would decidedly recommend the New Orleans

Advocate as prefsrable to any other.

And I doubt not if our preschers would make a little offort, but that many, both in and out of the Church. ould become subscribers for the N. O. Advocate. We are in the first place exceedingly anxious to get our own paper into every family; and I hops we shall not be wanting in effort to do so. But, then, many of our merchants and of light on almost overy topic of interest—religious, literary, foreign, domestio and commercial. You shall hear from me again. Your brother,

Dear. Bro. Mc Tyeire-Under date of th inst. I addressed you a communica ion, for the Advocats, on the subject of our parionage, prospects, etc., in this section, but not seeing it there as yet, I presume that it has miscarried. I therefore write again, but having kept no copy of the original, shall have to hape my sommunication anew, and in so doing I promise that the present shall be more condensed than was the former, which, by the by, may be no dis

In contributing toward the above sum, our riends have generally divided what they give into three parts; to suit the pay-ments—some putting down $100, others $75, $60, and so on. We have now in good subscriptions, (and hope to have it in notes soon,) between $450 and $500. The balance to complete the other two payments can be easily raised, when it is needed. This property is deeded to a Board of Trustees, appointed this-year, and incorporated according to law. Our church, here, is also deeded to this new Board, the old nover having been

We have been living in the parsonge, now, about eix months, and between you and me and every body, we find this ar preferable to living in other psople's louses, even though they be our friends. Our supplies have been fully equal to our wants, thus far,; how they have been procured, though, may be n subject of interest to whoever shall success us erc. We can tell any such, at a proper time, should they wish to know. Meanwhile, would only say, we think this is an important field to operate in, and farther, that it is with the preacher him-self, in a good degree, whether it be a pleasant one or not.

We had an interesting time at our second Quarterly Meeting, held at Pattersonville, on the 21st and 22d June, and protracted to the evening of the 24th Seven joined the Church, and two of the number have since professed religion. My Presiding Elder, Brother Kinnear, and his wife, were present working in good earnest, as usual wore with us, also, at a two days' meet ing held in this place 5th and 6th July, during which eight joined the Church, and one professed religion—two others of this number have since made a like converting grace. Amen and amen.

RESIGNATION. BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW. There is no flock, however watched and leaded; But one dead lamb is there! There is no lireshle, how-ne'er defended, But has one varant chair.

The air is full of farewells to the slying, And mourning for the dead se heart of Raeliael for her children crying, Will not be comforted! Let us be penitent! these severe inflictions ime this dark disgul e. We see dimly through the miss and vapors

Amid these earthly damps, What seem to us hot dim facereal tapers May be heaven's datant lamps, nere is no death! what seems so letranshion: This life of mortal breath . Is but a submb of the life elysian,

Whose portals we cell death She is not dead-the child of our affection-But gone unto that school Where she no longer needs our poor protection, 'And Christ himself doth rule, in that great cluster's stillness and medicajon. By guardian ongels led, Safe from tempration, safe from sin's pollution,

Day after day we think what she is doing By guardian angels led, Safe from temptation, safe from no's p illution, She lives, whom we call deed.

busilo we walk with her and keep unbroken, The bond which Nature gives; Thinking that our remembrance, the unspoken, May rouch her where she hven.

Not us a child shall-we ngain behold her; For when with raptures wild, In our embraces was again enfold her.

But a fair mailen, in her Father's mansion Clothed with celexial grace,
And be audful with all-lite soul's expansion . Shall we behold her face.

And though at times, impetuous with emotion, And anguish long supprest,
The swelling heart heaves mosaling like the ocea

Its blessings are net confined to the pale of the Church; but wherever a genuine revival of religion takes place in the Church, its benefits will be realized by the world in proportion to its depth and extent among the people of God. Sinuers will be brenght on the great men. In their own estimation, arms of faith to the feet of the cross, and pointed successfully to the Lamb el God; that taketh away the sin of the world; and they will roalize the eleansing and parifying influences of the Holy Spirit, and being made alive from the dead, will rejeice in the hope of eternal life.

Is it not desirable that such a gracious visitation should be roalized in every church and community throughout our borders? Yea, that the sacred leaven should be diffused until the world shall stand forth regenerated, and from every mountain and hill-top, from every continent and island, the joyful proclams tion. shall roverherate, "Allelniar the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."

Is it the will of God that such a state of things should exist? I cannot doubt It. He ward declares that he wills that all men should be saved; he commissioned his disciples to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to eyery creature; his very character as a God fuel news is cridente. of holiness, is evidence that he wills the holiness of his people, and is ever roady to bless the honost and faithful efforts ol' his Church and Ministry, te promete the spirit of heliness, and revive pure religion throughout the world.

Church in Christendom may enjoy a revival of religion, if they will faithfully use the means which God has sane tified for that purpose; and put God to the test, by complying with the couditions npea which he has promised his blessings to those that seek them.

Let n Church that wnnts a revival of religion sanctify a week fer this epecial pray at least three times a day, ou his kaces, in secret, for the eutpouring of the Spirit on the Church and community-let them, if possible, have preaching twice or three times each, day of the meeting. If uo preacher can he had, lot the Church meet together that often, and held prayer meetiags; and let those lay members whe may have gifts, give exhertations te their brothren-let every sermon and exhertation be given in faith—let the Church prny is faith for present blessings, expecting to see their the present division of the Christian. demptieu.

D., is brought invorably to notice; and the fact is also noted that within the last two years two female medical colleges have been es tablished—one at Beston and the other as Philadelphia. The moral bearings of this subject are discussed with great force by Mr. Husmer, and with equal justiness. We wish that in pamphles form this chapter could be circulated through the country. The practice complained of, and re-buked with such powerful indignation, is an uncalled for departme from the world's enitom for me, however, makes it necessary; it is to avoid this necessity that the author pleads for the Phys ical Education of women. Curious Facts from the Census.—A writer in the NewYork Observer rules an entire to nonce entirens lacts herived from the census of the United States. Phelet area show that there is a neutral late prevalence of idio y and tresulty among the free blacks over 16% where, and especially over the dayes. In the State of Maine every fourteenth cobred person is an idio or a lineaure. And though there is a gradual improvement in the condition of the colored race os we proceed west and south, yet it is a widen that the Free States are the principal abodes of idiosy and Immey among them.

In Ohio there are just ten colored persons, who are idious or lineaties, where there is use in Kentucky. And in Louisaina, where a large majority of the geogration is colored, and four-fine of them are laves, there is but one of these mafortunities to 4309 who are sale. The proportions mather States, according to the census of 1850, are as follows; in Maskardinastis, 1-in-43; Connection, 1 in 185; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 257; Penneylyania, 1 in 256; New York, 1 in 1053. The Caucasian Leader—Schamyl Bey and the Resignars.—Among all the military heroes of modern times, ne one is equal to Schamyl Bey, the leader and rater of the Caucasians. The despot of Resis has invaded his country with all the appliances of Russiae cunsing and force. Solamyl has auccessfully repelled this invasion, trem time to time giving the Russian armies a terrible over-throw. The struggle has a owe continued for years, and, at this moment, the "despet of the North fade Schamyl rather more invusible and reirible than ever.—And the Caucasians, having a min to lead them, seem to fellow him with implicit confidence and accentualism which inckes their capable of fightlog prodigious battles. Schemyl'a men, under his lieutacant, have just given the Rassianthe most terrible overthrow they have ever encountered in that quarter. The Russian lossen ere immense, not only is men, but also in arms, annuminon, and other military property.

Schamyl cancot be more than fifty years old. He is probably younger. About twenty-five years ago, when he was a youth, the Russian isok him prisoner. The Caur sought to Russianisch him, incorder te nee him as an Instrument against the Caucasians. Schamyl studied at the Russian military Schamyl studied at the Russian military academies, quietly keeping his own ceansel and carelolly observing aed studying every thing. He made himself master of every thing relating to the Russian ormy and the empire, and gained an accarate knowledge of those among his own people who had, in any degree been wrought on the Article Czar's efforts to soduce them. He passed several years in Russis. At leegth, one day, he auddenly disappeared. Successfully eluding all pursuit, he arrived safely among his own peopla in the mountains of the Caucasus, where he at occ proceeded to rally aud unite the various tribes, and organ at that resistance which has ever since been so fatal to the Car's armies. He fights in self-defence, animated by love of country. We regard-faintes one of the greatest of military heroes. The Russians have lound him, first incorruptible, and then invescible.

An Incident.-The Parls correspondent of the An Incident.—The Paris correspondent of the National Intelligencer relates the following:

"Two days since there was celebrated at the Invelids, with much pomp, a funeral ceremony in honor of Markhal Schattani. The occasion was signalized by an alarming accident. A servant, when was enowing about with an instrument to light the candles used in the religious services, negligently carried his light too near the funeral drapery with which the chapel was adorned. It took fire, and the flams was rapidly communicated to the glorious mill ary trophos of the empire, the two hundred and thirty-four flags taken from the enemy in a hundred fields, which were lings up beneath the dome. American makes the following well-timed and judicious remerks:

"The cleuse in the new constitution of Indiana," prohibiting free negroes from coming into the State—a cleuse which was adopted, esperately by a vote of nearly one hundred thousand—in believed by some to he in conflict with the Constitution of the Gorth article of the Constitution of the United States. The second account accion of the United States says: "The citizens of each of citizens entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the eeveral States;" and, in connection with this provision, the question atjaces whether free uegroes in any State are citizens, as contemplated by the Constitution. Are they cultivene of the United States!

This queeties has not yet been definitively settled by our highest jadicial tribunel. The discrimisation which is made in the constitutions of so many States in reference to this cless of population, pleinly implies that they are not regarded as citizens; nor is it likely that the Supreme Court, if called upon to decide the question, small every look and senting facts. Yat if any State should choose to rasks them citizens in the full extent of citizenship, as many perhaps be the case in some of the New England States, it would be difficult to question her right to do so; and then would come the clause of the Constitution to bear upon them, which gives to the citizens of each State all the privileges and immunities of elisiens in the sev-privilegos and immunities of elisens in the several States."

The disposition, however, which is indicated by the people of Indiane in reference to free negroes, bas been demonstrated in so merked a nonner that one can hardly duubt of its existence, more or less, to the same extent in ell the non-slave-holding States. The free white laborer dues not wish to one dunter the competition of negro labor; the white race does not desire coalition with the colored race. These are facte of physiology, which no more beer disputation than facts of astronomy, or of any often of the natural accences. And is it not a strange thing that the whole union about dedicturbed by agitation concerning a law for the reclama ion of lugitive negroes that run away into the non-slavebolding States, when there is not one of those non-alavebolding States that would not be glad to be free from the presonce of a hegro within its borders? Is it love for the negro, or supre against his meater, that produces this unnatural agitation?"

The questity blown down is beyond all precedent. The damege done to plentations and leasturing crops by such a flood and furicance is supposed to be very great.

It is sisted that the buildings at St. Merks, with the exception of the railroad warehouses, and Hol's Hetel, are gone. The floors of the warehouses were beaten out and the goods stored therein all flosted away or sank. The water rose wigher than it was ever knews before, end portions of the eld-bort, which hed withstood the floods of age, were swept sway, and all the buildings destroyed. The conton-house books and papers are all gone, and nothing is left of the establishment but the irin saile. The freme house occupied by the deputy collector, on the point of junction of the St. Mark's and Wekulla, was raised from its foundations, broke in the centre, and isshed to fraginenie ugainst the old fort. All the houses of little value) were certed away. The water is steed to have risen at least twelve feet obuve ordinary tide level. At the termines, the railroad was all uprooted.

The political news is of some interest and Imortance. The Bazilian commander, Admiral freudell, had penetrated the waters of the Urnguay tu conter with General Urgolza. In addition to the disaffection of the province of Entie Rios, that of Corientes had followed, and there was every symptom of an outbreuk, from the warlike preparations going on. Accounts from Brazil were regeried as not unfavorable, owing to the statements that Roas had accepted the raediation of Great Britain. The circumstance that Brazil report at the annual meeting. Oriental, and the termination by France of her anheidy to the Mante Videans, will also probably concribute to fepder an adjustment more any.

The slave trade on the const of Brazil was at list west abla 1000 slaves only having been landed

"South Carolina. The extraordinary freshets, and silded to it, the late terrible storm, has caused great injury and devastation to the crops in South Carolina. The Charleston Mercury, of the 2d, ys:

"One of the leading planters on Pon Pon rive

"One of the leading planters on Pon Pon river furnished us yesterdey with some very interesting isformation in regard to the rice and cotton crops. In that region. An extraordinary freshet had prevailed on the Edisto, which has literally deluged all the upper rice plantations, usually submerging the crop, and readering it extremely difficult to save may perties of it. The same fets has befulen the plantations on the lawer pare of the fiver, from the excessive high tides produced by the prevailing ceaterly winds.

"The cotton, he lawer pare of the prevailing ceaterly winds.

"The cotton, he lawer pare of the prevailing the proper Sen Island, region, wes almost universally prostrated by the late storm, and the plants, leeded with fruit and foilings, have no chence of recovering their upright position. This is the condition, we believe, of the whole-long cotton crop. The loss will, at any rate, be very great, and a wet September, by producing a growth of spronts from the roots, would go sear destroying the entire crop.

"The destruction by the storm was by so means limited to the seconst, though perhaps its greatest violeace were expended in that region. It extended over nearly the estire State, and every where left devastation in its track."

Georgin.—The storm which was so destructive in South Carolisa wes also quite severe in this State. The Albany Petrict, in reference to it,

ya:
Ou August 24 and 25 we were visited with "Ou August 24 and 25 we were visited with a xery sewere sterm of wird and rain. Thousands of trees were blown down, and in many places the woods were completely blocked up. Late corn is very much-liajured. We have conversed with many pleaters, and have seen some colton plantations siace the storm, and all concur in opinion that at least one-third of the cotton crop is destroyed. We have had heavy relps since the storm, which must do still further injury to cotton. If these evils have been general, we have so doubt the diminished yield will be compensated by the increased price consequent on a short crop. Alabama.—The prospect of the veroe in this by the increused price consequent on a short crop.

Alabama.—The prospect of the crope in this State, as we gather from our exchanges, is rether, gloomy. The Tuskogee-Republican says, in reference to it:

In Green county the cottan has taken the rust; it is sheddeng its leaves and bolls rapidly, and not more than 300 pounds to the acre will be made.

In Pike the recent storm has done great damage, and elso the lefe raise in Choetaw county. The same things has occurred in Inuter, where, oven before, the prispect was bad for an average crop. In Summer the crop cannot esceed a half, one. The lute reins there also have injured it amasingly.

The ordinary mode of pleasure conveyaneo in this place is probably not less uovel and interesting than the ahovo. The sand being very deep, pleasure carriages are almost entirely dis-peused with. full enjoyment.

The mode of seating is as novel as the idea of dray-riding itself. The drays are invariably floored with planks, in the form of a eart, so that a number of chairs can be placed in the most con venient position to each other. The parties then seat themselves in regular order, often to the number of six or eight; a rope is then drawn tightly around, coafining the chairs to the upright standards, so as to prevent any from falling out. The dray is then drawn by two horses, one in roar of the other, at full trotting speed. This is what we back country folks used to call

Though fully assured that this is the most common and fashiouable mode of conveyance for pleasure parties, it is a little amusing to see with what hesitan-cy'and oaution some of our up country and city visitors seat themselves for a Pensacola excursion. Oral assurance loes not seem to satisfy them of the propriety of dray-riding in a city; hut when they have a practical assurance in the persons of some of the influential, they at once lay asido their preconecived notions of otiquette, and cujoy the uovelty, acknowledging they have

Lot us now turn our attention to the nature of man, and see how that corresponds to this elomental principle which should guide every step he takes through life. We have already shown that it must be God's design to bring us to some particular end, because this is the accessary result of keeping his law, which is nothing else than a rule to govern our acts; and these, our particular acts, are only the motions that carry us through life, the sum of which brings us to our final end, and if all are done ac. nature of man, and see; how that corresto our final end, and if all are done according to the same rule given, we shall all come to the same end, having a common origiu. From private sources we learn that this College has opened its fall session with a large increase of students, President Wadsworth and Professor Hardy have laid the Church and country under high obligations for the energy and self-sacrifice with which they have devoted themselves to this institution. Under their labors the number of students has been increased within a few years frem 35 or 40, to between 120 and 30. Public confidence has been in spired in their ability to do and to live. The young men now in attendance are said to be remarkable for excellency of moral and intellectual character. Dr. Wadsworth is well and widely known u the South as a model preacher. Correspondence. La Tivange, Ala., September, 1851. My Dear Brother-The location of this institution is one of the most beautiful and remantie that can be conceiv .The mountain on which it stands is about three hundred fact above the surrounding valley. In one direction an extensive mountain range forms a beautiful curve, and affords a feast to the cultivated tasts; and a delightful play to the vivid imagination. In another direction, a valley which rivals "Thessalian Tempe," spreads as far as the eye can reach. Let us go on the top_ef_the College, whence we will en deavor to satisfy our vision, by beholding this wonderful seene. That village, some twelve miles distaut, which we see so distinctly, is Florence. It is situate on the bank of the Tennessee river, which, like a thread of silver winds its way through this fertile valley, and bears upon its bessur-the rich ittle to the left, another village, ten miles distant, is distinctly visible; that is Tuscumbia, colobrated for its great great Spring. Just think of a rivulet boiling up amid limestone rocks and sending forth its crystal waters with sufficient power to turn a mill, and affording a sufficient quantity of the coolest water, not only for the town, but for the largest city. That little village four miles to our east is Leighton. It Is one of the depots on the Tonnessee Valley Railroad. This road will soon constitute a portion of the great central route from Charleston to Memphis. Look at those splendid farms, those tasteful mansions, those beautiful, intertervening groves and tell ine did your eye plantation, with the nest white manyear twenty-five thousand dollars. But let us descend. Let us enter this hall. How beautifully it is arched, how finely earpeted, what elegant furniture; look at that throne with tho arch above, on which are written the mystic words Vivanius augere momentum; and be-hold this Library of two thousand volumes, well selected, and tastefully kept. This is the Dialectic Hall. Here the youthful gladiators meet in powerful mental conflict. We will now go to the room helow. Do you see that elegant likeness of Lafayette? It is the production of Prof. Hentz, a native of la belle France, and the hushand of the celebrated Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz. This senery on the wall is taken from the Lady of the Lake; it is beautiful. The Library is fully equal to the other; and the furniture is still more elegant. This is the Lafayette Hall, and has

My Dear Editor - This intensety plutenie weather, has rather retarded yeur request is mon devoir, and by your permission has been made mon privilege. I sat out-I forget hew many weeks since-with one of the strongest of determinations to "drop you a line" about things in general, at least, semi-month-ly. I "run well" for the first month; but alas for me, I was so unfortunate as to suffer myself to be hindered, by indelence in part, and to some extent, by engagements of a different kind.

Since my last communication I have been "knocking about" in portions of Alabama and Mississippi—reading a little—musing more—thinking somewhat on the homeopathic principleattending some protracted meetings, ete., etc.

THE LIGHTS OF TEMPERANCE, ley, and bears upon its bessur the rich a copy of which, my old friend and products to your own crescent city. A compoer, the Editor, Rev. Jas. Young, forwarded me, by mail, has engaged a part of my leisure time. It is a neat volume 360 pages, and contains Addresses, Essays and Tales from sixteen writers, mostly Ministers of the Gospel, of various denominations.

The publication of such a volume supplies a desideratum, long felt hy the. friends of temperance, and particularly, by the Order of the Sons of Temperance. It supplies lecturers with arguconta facts statistics, etc. all collected into one volume-thus relieving him of the drudgery of looking through an entire library, even if ho is so fortunate may need. I hope every Division will straig and Blackwood for August. A vest amount supply itself with a number of copies, ever rest upon a more beautiful scene? for distribution. Such a benificence. Do you see that large well cultivated would doubtless accomplish more than the parade and addresses usual on Ansion? That farm yielded its nuner last niversary occasions. I do not mean by this any disparagement to the latter custom. There is demand enough for both, as any one who will stand about our streets on election days, and political barbecue occasions, will be con-vinced. The two might be bleuded. PORTRAITURE AND PENCILINGS OF MRS. L. A. CROSS.

This is the title of another admirable work, for the perusal of which I am in-debted to the Editor, Rev. Jos. Cross. The "Portraiture" proper, extends through 156 pages, and is a beautiful wasting one, as I followed him in his "summerrambles"—through the "sunny South "—through the the thick-falling "tears of her," shed over "the dear little poetess." Felicia Hemans, Mr. Cross's daughter, by a former marriage, who one morning, consing in "with her apron full of flowers, sat down, and wove them into a crowu, which she placed ou her head;" and who the next day, at the summen of Him who was once a little child hims elf, "went up to wearing on unfading wr eath in heaven uated at Randolph Macon Cellege, in Tears would come too, as I read of the death of her own and only born, Lelia Thalia, and of the mother's wish respecting the place where "the beautiful clay" of her little darling should rest, expressed in the following simple yet touching language: "I want her buried where I may visit her grave; and when and honored by the Trustees and com the flowers blossom in the spring, I will munity. But the crowning glory of go there and weep; and there the sweet little spirit will come and kiss away my tears !" But when that flower season came, she and the 'little poetess," and

The " Pencilings, with an arrange. ment creditable to the taste of the Edtor, and much to the pleasure of the reader, are classed into Epistolary, Pulpit, Miscellaneous, Fragmentary and Poetic, and are "mere excerpts from Mrs. Cross's diary." LETTER VIII.

The Wesleyan Conference is over, and well over. It has been a remarkably decorous and unanimous meeting. Beaumont has, of course, taken en all occasions the negative side. But the Docter has exhausted, by this time, his influence in the Conference. He searcely ever gains an echo to a prepeal or a sentiment; and it is remarkahle that although some years ago Drs. Bunting and Beaumont formed the opexhibit of the inward, rather than the cutward, life of the gifted, but early called Saint of Cod. Ah, how buy heart yearned over the faithful but share in the business of the Conference were grouped, and though Dr. Bunting's share in the business of the Conference has heen growing less for two of three has heen growing less for two of three years, and this year has been comparatively very little indeed, yet his oppo-uent's influence, instead of increasing, has declined, and is at this moment far less than it has been for these twenty years or more. Ont of doors, too, as well as within the Conference, his reputation has very much sunk, and his popularity has greatly decreased, both in amount and (far more) in quality. Dr. Buuting has, this Conference, been very feehle, and has kept very much in the background; yet his intellect seems to. be as clear as ever, and his influence is still, as it has a right to be, very great. when he chooses to exert it. lle is net, however, as a correspondent of yours

Conference, at present, is as follows There is a section, at the head of which erimiual concession to au unpriucipled and unholy agitation. There is another section, including the large-majority of the Conference, and led principally by the ex-Presideut, Dr. Beecham, and Mr. Scott—with the aid and council of Dr. Bunting-who think that uo time can he improper for doing that which is initself, clearly wise and right, and who wish to look candidly and carefully at the whole system of Wosloyan Methodism, with a view to making such modilications as may conduce to its easier and more efficient working. These, howregret to me, and will prove so, no tion as the lirst section—their concessions are not to the agitators, but to corpts" were not extended, and that a white in itself is right. The Corresponding Committee of the agitators made two proposals to the Conference which has just closed. The first was a repetition of one made to the Conference of the preceding year, that the Conference, or a committee appointed by it, should enter into treaty with the representatives of the nglta tion, that they might, in conjunction. settle a plan for the future government of Methodism. That is, they demanded to be admitted to confer with the Conference on equal terms, as a co-ordinate legislative authority in regard to Methodism! Their second proposal was adopted from Mr. Walton's recent pamplilet, and only asked that the Con. ference should agree that the points of difference between themselves and the expelled agitators should be referred to the arbitration of a third party—say of several Iudependent Ministers. A modest proposition truly and worthy of those that made it. I need not say that the Conference civilly declined both these offers.

ference, according to the provisions of Wesleyan law, from Circuits and private individuals came under considera-tion, the Conference proved that it was quite disposed to receive with respect-ful attention all constitutional petitions, offering suggestions for the improvement of Methodism. The number of these memorials was not very largeonly fifty Circuits petitioned out of 446—besides about 170 petitions from private individuals. But they, donbtless, represented the views of many Circuits which thought it unnecessary or nnadvisable to express their senti ments by petition. These memorials or petitions were area carefully and a classified synopsis of them prepetitions were first carefully analyzed, pared, by an able minister, the Rev. W. 11. Taylor. They were then submitted to the consideration of a very large, influential and impartial committeewho speut upon them some twelve hours of close attention. The report of that Committee was then laid before the Conference, and freely discussed on the last morning but one (Friday) of its session, just a week ago. The result was the appointment of a most excellent and very numerous Committee, consisting of about fifty Ministers, who are to meet during the year, and to consult with a number of the most able and influential laymen in Methodism, and to prepare a report, and, .. if they deem fit, a seheme and proposals in reference to the whole present ease of Methodism to he laid hefore the next Conference, on its meeting at

But time cuts mo short. DR. MORRISON-ISAAU BARROW.-No feeling of discouragement should over prevail with the parcut. Want of suo cess should lend to self-inquiry, to vig orous effort to a faithful study of the orous effort, to a faithful study of the subject in all its parts, but never to discouragement. Such a feeling in the Christian hotrays a want of humble coulidence in the God of grace. The case of Dr. Morrison cannot be too often urged—thoragged, ahandoned and liardened Sabhath School boy, about to be dismissed by his discouraged teacher—one effort more, and he hegomes the ou offort more; and he hocomes the subject of penitenee and faith—then the learned and indefatigable translator for the Chinese, and now a star of the first magnitude in the East, reflecting beams from the Sun of righteousness that they may light millions to glory. Such was the early stupidity and bopoless conduct of that sound English divine, Isaae Barrow, that, strange to say, his father, in utter despair of his grace less son, called out, that if called to part with any child, it might be Isaac. Love is net only the determining, therities make to regulate the conduct of men in their commerce with each other. It cannot avail against this position that States have passed positive principle—peace and good will among men. This only proves that such have rance of the true principles of law, by dent spirits? Let every man that lovee God, or his neighbor, or society, or his own family, set his face against this law, and never cease to exert his influence until it is repealed, and the traffic in this accursed poison is effectually abolished. Anomalies, however, will occur in human laws, while imperfections he-long to human reason; but we may challenge the onemics of our holy oxtravagantly magnificent. For in the lirst place, the history of the discoveries in the arts and physical sciences, shows that the human physical sciences, snows that the human mind has been slow to gather knowledge of any kind; and the history of the progress of moral truth in the world teaches the humiliating lesson, that into this subject it is prone to err. And in the next place it has been univer-complish-his own-wise-and henevolentourposes; and from it we may deduce nan's capacity and accountability, and the duties he ewes to God, to himself, and to his fellow men. There is an en-larged sense, indeed, in which the fulfillment of every engagement of life is merely the discharge of a duty to God, since it is his will that binds to the engagement. But we are accustomed to speak in a more restruined sense, of duties to society, govornment, etc. In this restrained sense I shall speak of the du-ties which arise under the justitution of marriage, and shall endeavor to show that the Christian marriage, which assigns one woman to one man, Is founded ou the laws of nature, and strongthens no position that love is the foundation of thoso laws; and incidentally, I shall try to illustrate the postulate with which we set out at the heginning of his article.

That this institution has its foundation in the laws of unture is proved, by the equality, in point of number, of the soxes; by the fact that it promotes the health and comfort of hoth parties, tonds to the procreation of the greatest numvigorous miuded, healthy oitizens, furnishes motives for industry and economy in private life, promotes the peace and good order of society, by out ting off a prolilio source of jealousy and discord uneag men, and affording a proper etimulus for chastity and the cultivation of the domostic virtues among women. It strengthens the bonds of society by distributing it into families in which there is a permanent nuion of interests, and a mutual guardianship is established over each other's conduct, by making the happiness of each in some degree depend upon the good he-havior of all. It affords the best opportunity to hestow the needful care and attention to ohildrou when young, and the hest moans of giving them propor instruction while growing up; and hy cultivating the filial allections, which are planted in the breast of all, it insures the support of parents when they grow old, and in turn bocomo helpless and dependent.
On-the other hand, promisouous in ercourse between the sexes is so utterly repugnant to the laws of nature and to principle of lovo, that society could not possibly subsist whore it was universally practiced; and higamy weakens the banefits of marriage ulmost to the point of dissolving society. Bigamy divides and vitiates the affections of the husband and father, and stimulates sousual propensities to such an unnatural degree as to impair the physical constigrades the female, and weakens her motives to virtuo, and must, to a great dogree, destroy that constancy of affection' which is the pride of her character wherever the Christian marriage has been properly observed. And because this practice violates the economy of generation, it degenerates the ollspring; and accordingly wherever it has obevident that an institution which secures us gainst these evils on the one hand, and on the other obtains for as the benefits feehly set forth above, and a waste number of ethers, not entimerated, must have its foundation in the hindradian allow of love, and claims from us our warnest admiration, our deopest gratitude, and most cordial acquiescences and supports at our attention of the above work, and lumberisticingly say it is the hest collection of tunes, and supports at the duties which the relation imposes upon the parties, and may easily determine the propriety of any line of conduct, by considering whether it will promote domestic peace and harmony—this height be will of God, that wo love one nonther. Conjugal idelity is the first duty of the relation. But it is equally plain, both parties are hound to cultivate mutual for bearance and mutual love; to watch over each other in prosperity; to sympathise together in additional case of the set of the above work on this subject; and from the number of the propriety of supports.

Synonymes-Antipodes.

Mr. Editor-Tho object of this article is to hring to the notice of some one who may romedy the ovil, the unpardon able abuse of synonymes. The unblushing manner in which they are constantly pressed into service by public spacers is certainly to be reprehended, and ought, possible, to be romedled. Why, sir, one single thought is made to answor for a whele sermon, perhaps, one hour and a half long, and at the same time thors you I could show you larger than any you had seen! And thus he would make the man believe that almost half make the man helleve that almost half the trees were big poplars.

And just so with many who use syne-nyme extravagantly. They would have their congregation believe that their lands a perfect forest of poplars, when the truth is, there is but one, and that, perhaps, just over the line. Now, all this Leharge to the book of synonymes. Well, what is the remady? The book would be destroyed; and if it were, it is wout be destroyed; and if it were, it is already stereotyped upon the brain of many. Let me suggest that some ore competent furnish us with a book of antipodes. He need not give it the name of antipodes; lot it have any name Couldn't a former assistant of nor, but who has since as in pror himself, be induced to do it? I hope, sir, your editerial self will give this subject a thenght, and if what the form sugge he practicable, you we take of it such notice as its importance demands.

Open Air Preaching.

It is father surprising to us, but not less gratifying, to fall upon the fellower ing, in several of our exchanges. John Wesley would be in fashion now in England.

The clorgy of the Established Church in Liverpool have made arrangements for maintaining open air preaching in attacked by a mob of Irish Catholios, while conducting one of these services; but the police interfered to protoct him The Presbyterians in the North of Iroand have adopted this medo of propa-gating the Gospel. The Syned of Bsi-fast has recommended to all its ministers to preach in the open air to all who will lister to them. On this subject the British Ban, ver remarks;

"It is not a little romarkable, that this method of propagating the Gospel should in these to mes be so seldon had recourse to, and in deed viewed as not very creditable to m inisters of standing of all methods the most oreditable. His roports show that if he can do'a year's work (doubtful) he has yet to learn how to wind it up. "A few such incumbents in succession would prostrate the finest appointments in any Conference-netwithetanding the most altractive pulpit displays.

Per contra : Is it not too common or preachers to pass censure upon their Bredeecssors? For instance, the first communication to the Church paper, after their installation, epens in such style as this-"When I entered upon this work every thing was in disorder The Church was cold and backslidden. But etc." New it is a good spur to diligence and exactness for every one to know that his year's work will be immediatoly and closely inspected by his successor; but such remarks are often hasty and de'injustice to him that went before. All that he has done cannot be appreciated. In this respect, truly, he leaves ne record on earth; his record is on high. God only is witness to the tears with which he sowed. This wholesale condemnation of all that has been dene, this capricious change of policy recoils upon the incumbent and weakens entrance in unto you, that it was not in the confidence of the people in his ewn in For our exhortation was not of schomes of reformation and improvement. It were better, we humbly submit, to water than upreot what a predoessor has planted: to take up his plans of operation as far as they can be nnderstood and conscientionaly adopted and carry them cut. A new broom sweeps clean; and it is well to have stations and circuits swept clean occasienally; but oneness of design is not to be lost sight of. The itinerancy need not be, and is not, as its enemies have said of it, a periodical woaving and unraveling of Penelopo's web. The winding up the work has much to do ln preventing this interruption of dosign, and therefore it is most important that it he done in a sound and self-explaining

For the N. O. Christian Advocate. Singular, Yet True.

Mr. Editer-Strange fancies and new fangled notions are semetimes mistaken for divine impressions and echvictions actions resulting therefrom are not unfrequently, in their ultimate effects, very injurious to good or-der, merality and religion, and there-fore should be well guarded and closely scrutinized at every point. This has been brought vividly before our mind'e oye, and we have been caused to reflect seriously thereupon, by the following

Mr. S., a member of the Methodist Church, who had heen bappised, (but had not been immersed,) hecame dissatisfied with his baptism, and requested two or three Methodist preachers to baptize him by immercian, but they, believing that he had been scripturally haptized, and that a repetition of the ordinance would be sacrifegioue, refused te de se. Se netime afterward Mr. S. availed himself of an opportunity of hearing a "Christian," alias a "Campcellite" preacher preach en the "subfully satisfied (according to his own chowing,) that he could not enjoy religion and get to heaven if he centinued to neglect to be immersed. According-ly, when the preacher called upon all those whe wiehed to "ge down into the water" and be immersed, he presented himself, answered all the questions pro-pounded by the preacher, and was bap-tized by him. Shortly after this Mr. S. met with the Methodist preacher having charge of the circuit where he (Mr. S.) lived, and on being queetioned about the matter, gave the facts as above related. The preacher in charge of the circuit, believing that baptism is he door into the Church, and that Mr. 3., by being immersed by the "Campbellite" preacher, repudiated his former bettier bring and withdrew from the Methodist Church, removed his name the character of the conduct of "S."?

from the class book. Mr. S. contended very irregular and inconsistent—the that he had not withdrawn from the Church—that he had simply heen immersed to eatisfy his conscience, and that to remove his name from the class book was unjust. But the preacher refused to replace his name on the class book as it was before he was immersed by the Campbellite preacher.

Now, Mr. Editor, we wieh, with your permission, to propound a few queetions:
Ques. 1. Did Mr. S., by this act, withdraw from the Methedist Church?
Ques. 2. If he did not, is not the Preacher in charge censurable fer removing his name from the Class Book ? Ques 3. If by the act he did not withdraw from the Methodist Church, was he then a Methodist, er a Campbellite, or a member of both Churches at Ques. 4. If the Procedure, in remov-ing his name, did wrong, what should he have dene?

Ques. 5. Should the 'Preacher have oited him to trial before the Class, er simply passed the matter by without Ques. 6. If he should have been of ted to trial, by what rule in the Disc pline should be have been tried? By giving us your views on this singular ease, either in anewer to these questions, er etherwise, you will confer favor on the QUERIST.

These questions are ef practical and general interest. They were turned over to a ministerial friend of large disciplinary experience and ripe judgment, who brings in the fellowing re-1. "Did Mr. S., by this act, with draw from the Methodiet Church?"

We answer, no. In proof of this we ebvioue principles. There are but two beeu methode knewn to cur discipline by which members in full fellowship can disselve their cennexion with the Church-expulsion and voluntary withdrawal. No one can either enter or withdraw from the Church unintention. ally; ner can any member withdraw frem the Church without the knowledge and concent of at least, the Paster." Ne administrator of discipline has nl. The first of these prepositions will be disputed by ne one. The second is equally clear, fer ne ene with us knews any thing of persons being brought inte the Church without their consont. And if mombers could threw themselves ent of its pale by simplo mistakes in the ahsence of immorality, then the continuance of this sacred relation is dependent not upen ohristian oharacter and cenduct, but upon the possessien of a given amount of intellect; a propesition which will not bear discussion. Ner can members dissolve their Uhurch relatione without the consent of the Church, or its Paster; etherwise parsubject, and now Texas speaks, and ties can go out of the Church by eimply declaring themselves out, which aissippi and Alabama and Florida will wenld be the admission of a principle subversive of all the legitimate, salntary ends of Church discipline. As Church membership is a mutual compact between the momber and the her Missionary Treasury, but Book Church, it can only be mutually desolved, when there has been ne violation of the conditions of the compact. The third propeeition is established by the statute law of the Church. New it is admitted in the case before us that there was no form of trial or investigation, and that Sa protests that ho did not intend, and dees not wish to leave the Church. He is therefore not out of it by law, or form of procedure known to the Methodist Church, or by the operthe Advocate. The subject is not a local ene. the door into the Church is a constructive one, and by no means so clear, es-

We have ne hesitation in answering, neither. Baptism for the remission of sin," in the Camphellite sense, is net Gospel Baptism. See Hooker, B. 5., ch. 62 sec. 6, and Dick, vel. 2, p. 386. But Camphelliem net only denice the personality of the Spirit, and se the deetrine of the Trinity, but also justificatien by faith and regeneration by the Spirit; and any association rejecting these truthe ie not a Church of Christ. Your correspondent is quite mirtaken in reporting that Wesleyan mir isters in England "never use the appellation hrether among preachers er laymen They commonly do so, very commonly, especially with each other. I knew of ue ministerial friend, unless he he many years elder than myself, whom I do not customarily, in all familiar intercourse, call "Brother," although I am, in some more of hie errata in my next, which are really of importance.

The religious papers during the l fortnight have been very much taken up with the Conference of the Evangelical Alliance, which terminated its eittings, I believo, on Wednesday last, after more than, a fortnight of delightful-intercourse. I confees that in common, I helieve, with most of those who had givon attention to the history of the Alliance, whether approving ef its princi-ples or not, I had uover expected to see another universal convention of its members, such as that which has just terminated. Any attempt at a second coordinate reunion, in connection with the Alliance, I expected to be a failure. I looked upon the whole affair as a noble and praiseworthy attempt, which even if it eventually failed in its speoific objecte, could not but do very much permanent good. With such views I became a member of it. As an impulse and an event I thought its good would be great, as an erganization I expected it to fail. It has, however, disappointed, te a great extent, my sceptical profinostics. It has not only lived, often He doubt, with a languishing life, through many unkindly influences and inuoli opposition, hut it has flourished forth anew with a viger and benuty be-yend all hepe. The late Conference has encouraged ite friende and surprised has enceuraged ite friende and surprised its enemies. It was a geodly sight to see clergy of every nation and of every name, including many British Episopal clergymen, assembled for metal ocuntonance and counsel, in the prosecution of their great common object, and to draw cleser the bonds of mutual levo. And that cannot he a foolish or a feeble erganization, which includes among ite members and supporters not ameng ite members and supporters not only the very neblest names of British Christianity, but such men from afar the Meneds and De Presseuse of France, Theluck and Krummacher of woro present. A Syrian Christian, also a Chinoso yeuth, and a converted Brahmin from Mangalor, were there to represent the first fruits of Eastern Evangelical Christianity; America how ever, was deficiently represented—us, misrepresented, for Dr. Baird of N. Yerk, and Dr. Bacon of New Haves, are nion of mark and of power. Dr. Wilsou, also, of Cincinnati, was present But for reasons which all your reader will well understand, those were all or very mearly all, the Americans present Dr. Baird expressed himself on the subjoct of his countrymen'e chjocticas to the alliance with great frankness and much national feeling. He was been with the greatest deference and kind-ness, although mest, if not all, of the British present thought come of his oemparisons and strictures rather more free than fair. He and his co-patrick met the Council of the Alliance to take the subject of America, as connected with the Alliance, inte consideration,

"The Council report that they have had much friendly conference with the American brothren, in which frank and courtoous explanations have been mucontroous explanations have been indi-tually given, which have shown hew im-portant it is for Christians residing on opposite shores of the Atlantic to have s clear understanding of each other's position, and to assist each other in discouraging national jealousies, and in prometing the interests of humanity and religion; that the American brethten have made no request that the British organization should not still adhere to its Constitution as originally settled and that the Council are also satisfied that no alteration should be made in it. At the same time the Council recommend that in the inter-course between the Christians of the two countries all uncharitable actions. and expressious be avoided; and they desire to encourage their brethren from the United States to renew their efferts to revive the organization of the Evangolical Alliance existing there, in accordance with the resolution of the Conference of 1846, in the confidence that, or the divine blessing, the difficulties which have hitherto obstructed their progress will, in answer to prayer, and under the influence of their united wisdom and charity, gradually give way, until they are altegether removed."

The whole subject of America was subsequently discussed at length in the Alliauce, and it was, Aplieve, arranged that a deputation should visit the States. The effect of all the cenversations cannot fail to be beneficial to all parties.
The Alliance, in common with all seberminded British Christians, is anxieus to disclaim all sympathy with the say-ings and doings of such itinerant and professional agitators as George Thomp-som: 1 should add that Dr. Baird reada most interesting and valuable paper, chiefly statistical, on the state of religion and religious communities in the United States; and Dr. Bacon gave an admirable statement respecting Missions in the Turkish Empire. A remarkable feature of this Alliance meeting has been the number of master ly papers which have been read on various subjects connected with the progress of religious truth. These are to be collected and published. On the Continent matters remain very much in statu quo. The Councils General of France are almost unanimous in favor of the revision of the Constitution. Seventy-four out of 80 are said to have declared in its favor; some of them explicitly, with a view to the continuance in office of Louis Naleon. The formidable and extensiveramified conspiracy which has been discovered-a communist conspiracy of the most desperate character-and the court-martial at Lyeus, where the conspiracy prematurely exploded, are the topics of interest in the French jeur-

New THE LATE RIOTS.

The Finner Committee have sluly considered the petitione of Ferris and Gelpi, A. Grailbe and others, making claims against his Municipality for property destroyed by rioters on the 21st of August last. Your committee deeming the subject of great importance, and involving tha question of how far, or ni what extent, Municipal Corporations are limble to citizens for losses of that character, referred the question of liability to R. Hunt, Esq., the Attorney of the Municipality for his legal opinion thereon, and they henewith submit his report, which exhibits a thorough investigation of the whole subject matter, and evinces great legal pality, and clearness; but while it expresses the opinion that "the Corporation is responsible, at least morally, for the dumage sustained," yet it clearly asten that the writer has "not been able to finil a case in our own jurispondence, or in that of our sister States, in which an action against a Municipal Corporation hus been sustained stunder circumstances similar ut these upon which, the present applications, are, founded, except where lend saturary provisions exprissly give the remedy." All allim furfler says: "from the light in which Municipal Corporations are regarded by our present Supreme Cont, i am of upinion that the Municipality will not held legally bound to indemnify the petitioners for the losses they have sustained by reason of the mob on the 21st of August last; the upsaturablem risurally presents listle to indemnify the petitioners for the losses they have sustained by reason of the mob on the 21st of August last; the upsaturable maintailly presents listle to the entitioners; the answerds, evidently in the negative—for greatly as your committee deprecate all acts of mol violence, and dwaply as they sympathic with the sufferers from these lawless deeds, yet in the discharge of their diny they feel il incombent on them to keep a first flum the perion of the property is evidently in the actual loss custained. Our discipline is strictly parental. Wa seek to

Our discipline is affectly parental. We lead to introduce and administer no rule conflicting with that sacred relation. Government is necessary, and if we cannot persuade we punish. Our cor-rections, as far as practicable, are of a moral kind. Our course of study comprises all the branches embraced in the circle of the Sciences, and enough of the Mathematics and Ancient and Modern Languages to qualify any one for the business of active life. Muslo and Ornamental Needle Work will be taught to those who wish it. Our school is designed to supercede the necessity of going abroad; and, while the instruction shall be solid and useful, sufficient polish will be added to make the popula casy and accomplished in their manner.

Our Board of Instruction is composed of the Principal, who has general supervision, a by as many competent Teachers as may be required. The Principal refers to bis patrons during quired. The Principal refers to bis patrons during past years for his qualification; and he letter arganged will bring testimonials from his sources attesting their echolarship and ability.

Our location is a beautiful bluff on the season of Pearl River, mearly midway between from scenes of traffic and trade, and the puell in beest by few or no tempusions of indulance and vice.

Our object is to build a school that shall be permanent and exert an estensive and powerful indence for intellectual and moral good—a school that shall take rank with any in South Mississipet in this grade of its scholarship and the amount of its usefulness—a school that shall prompts the culture of the mind and the education of the heart—a and widely scatter the light of truth, and prove an honor and blessing to our country and people. Our location has every physical and coorrelated advantage. Will the people—the gene-help-our noble enterprize ! Our Rates of Tuitlon are not so ches cheaper by half—than in any school upon the country; but cheaper, far che per cheaper by half—than in any school upon the Coast that we know of, where they have such a complete course of sludy and give such thorough instruction. The charge for Music, Fruich, etc., is low, without a parallel any where that our accomplistings assented.

Principal. In conclusion, we urga all persons interes

the cruse of education to consider seriously our clours upon their influence and patrons d. Com-and see us, or cummulate with as at gooder and in planting a school that you will soon as growing and yielding a barvest of rich and un-tured fruit, in the intellectual expansion, mean purity, and social and spiritual expanses of you sons and daughters.

The Hoa. Henry Wilson, President of the Senete, presented the President to Mayor Bigelow, who presented the President to Mayor Bigelow, who welcomed him to Bostoe with as address, in pert, as follows:

"Sir: The people of Boston now crowd her gates to receive, with tokens of honor, the great head of the Republio, and in their eeme I bid you welcome to this metropolis. We regard it as a heppy omen that we receive you on the epot where our fathera gathera do besit the coming of Washington is the first year of his Presidency—the contrest exhibited between their period and this is striking end instructive. The selutations extended to the first President were the offering of only 18,000 inhabitants, while the welcome proffered io his successor this day is the voice of a population of 180,000. The ruler who wes then received, administered the affisirs of less thee four millione of people; who had istely emerged—from the suckeof battle, and were but beginning, under the influences of Liberty and Union, to take rank emong the nations of the earth. You, sir, we receive as the Rescutive Chief of a population of tweety-four millions, living in the enjoyment of an emoust of prosperity and happiness, almost unperclibed inthe history of the world. By a remarkeble coincidence, which doubtless has occurred to yourself, you visit us on the anniversary of the completioe of the federal constitution. It is a dey peculiarly fitting for our reception of him whose authority as the federal Chief Magistrate is derived from that great compact."

of the federal coestitution. It is a dey peculiarly fitting tor our receptioe of him whose authority as the lederal Chief Magistrate is derived, from that great compact."

Mr. Fillmore replied—

"I receive from you, sir, as the executive organ of this proud city, this welcome for me nnd my associates, with profound gratitude and, enotice. You have alleded to the fact that this is the anniversary of the day on which the constitution was completed, and have also alluded to the visit of General. Washington to, this city. What a change smee that time when he first visited this city, not for the purpose of receiving the cordial congratulations of the citizens, but for the purpose of defending her against the tyriany and oppression of the mather couhry! If my memory servee meriality is son of Virginia, who connected the fate of that State with yours, was appointed the communiterin-chief of the army in Philadelphia, and started tience for the sent of war, near your proud city, forthwith. History tells us thet he traveled from Pt Hadelphia here in cleven days, and on his sarrivel the good citizens of Watertown, in your vicinity, gathered together and congratulated him on the speed of his journey! What has brought about this change! Why is it they that distance which took him eleven days, and that, too, after the battle of Bunker Hill, which urged him to use the speed of an express, has now been traveled by me, as a matter uf pleasure, in almost as many hours! It is owing to the intellect of your citiaens, who have opened the avaeues of commerce to the Vestern world; and poured into your lep her rich treasures. You have stretched your Brianess, who have opened the avaeues of civilization and lineiligone, which all Bustorn gives, convince me the treasures. You have stretched your Brianess and at every sacrifice. [Loud, long rontinued, and entituents the cheering.] I see it, eot only in the intelligence of your citiaens and their novel power, but I see in the troops hefore me the physicel forca to accomplish this purpose.

President proceeded to the Revere House, which be reached about half-past two. The huildings along the route were festioned with flags, ever-greens, and wreaths of flowers. Banners were suspened ecross the streets, at short intervals, bearing appropriate and striking inscriptions. From the Revere House, ecross to the Bowdoia Square Church, was thrown a line of flags, embracing those of England, France, and the United States. The latter bore the inecription: "Of all Blood—one Netion."

The Caty Hall was highly ornemented. The flags with the armorial bearing of the Canedas, sage with the armorial bearing of the Canedas, gava it a fine appearance.

A large arch was erected over the general passages way, the columns of which were inscribed with the manes of thirty-two railroads of Massochusetts; centering in Busten. On the face of the arch, as viewed from the South, a train of cars was represented in tuil taction, and there appeared the motto, "Grand Railroad Juhilea, September 17, 18, 19, 1851." On the reverse was the inscription: "Canadas and the Great West!" Prosperity to all!" The emblem epolosed by the

The half was throughd with spectators, covernor Boutwell, in 'accordence with a unanimous vite of the Legislature, and in the name of the people of Massachusetta, lendwird to the President and the members of his Cablinet from other States, a generous and cordiel welcome. "Nor will we, on this occasion," said he, "forget him whom Massachusetts his, for a long period of her constitutional listory, delighted to innor." [Vociferous cheering] "The words in welcome are from my lips, but the sentiment is in the hearts of the people." [More appiause.]

He closed his address by saying.:

"Sir, We desire most patientarity to insoure you hat Minese-busetrs is frue to the Constitution—and the Union—that in the future, as I hope I may say the has been in the past, she will know no North, no South, no East, not no West, only the Reputrice, one and indivisible—and for yourself, sir, allow to hope that your public services may be agreedable to the country, and that while to you and hear field to the country and that in the day of your retirement, you may snjoy the usual results of a virinous public and private career. In the name of the people of this Commonwealth, I egain hid you welcome to Measuchinacits."

weath, I egain his you weecome to measurementally.

Mr. Fillmore replied in the following terms:

Governor of Massuchusells—Under no circumstancen rould I have received such a welcome as thus through the Erecutive head of this grent State, without feeling the deelest emotion of gratitude. From the moment that I had crossed the line of this area: State, it has been one scene of welcome. You have said that your institutions of charey kind are open to be inspected by myself and those associated with me. It is gratifying to he permitted to look into the institutions of this State, one of the most flourishing in the Union. You have said, it, that your State is prepared to sustain the Constitution and the Union. Sir, see I passed through this city, I saw your streets lined for miles with mobinities of people—to winess the extreme order that preveiled, I could never for a moment believe that this community could be brought, under any circumstances, to commit treason against the United States. (Cheers end applauss.)

Sir, it is my duty, and sometimee it hes been a painful one, to execute the laws of the Union against those who did not approve of them. This must be the cese with all who occupy the position which I now do; but I see evidence, that as far as this city and State are concerned, this duty will hereafter be performed with ence and satisfaction. Sir, I congratulate you on the proud eminence which this State occupies is the great work of internal improvement. You have appead were railroads, and invited the commerce of the West end those associated with me. They are more capable of doing it for themselves than I em—(moving his hand towerds Mr. Webster.) Permit me, however, to say, that I receive this testiaony of the inhabitons of Boston and Massachusetta, not as a personal respect to myself, but os on evidence of their division and of their dotermination to sustain both.

Mr. Webster was then loudly called for, and spoke as follows:

May it place your Excellency, this occasion is Mr. Fillmore replied in the following terms:

Into it the Constitution and our glorious Union, and of their doterminetion to austain both.

Mr. Webster was then loudly called for, and spoke as follows:

May it plane your Excellency, this occasion is not name: its honors and its duties are intidue to or from me. The State—the great State—the old Pennill Itali State of Massachusetts, has invited the President of the United States within her horder. To you honored person end to your honored office, may it please your Excellency, this visit is paid.

Sir, I nm a good deal touched with the kind, the too kind, reception which you have given its. As I have said, sir, the occasion belongs to the President, end to there of this Cabit is whin her sanagers. Thack God, I can no stratiget here! [Applaced] I am of Massachusetts! [Cheers.] And I would rather rijutes in taking a part with you, may it please your Excellency, as the Governor of the State and my fellow cultivates who surround you, in paying honor to the Presidency of the United States, [cheers.] than in acting any part or indemanding any part towards my-elf And, may it please your Excellency, it wish, in the lirt place, to sny, that, from the holtom of my heart, I wish entire success to the administration of the great affairs of this State, in whomeoever hends those affairs fall. If mey are fairly and impartially administered, those hands shell have my hand in their support. [Sensation.] In the next place, in my say that I devoutly wish the greet interest of the cermmonwealth may prosper.

Our interests are various—they ere complex. We have a million of people living on a very small surface—an a sterile coil, and beneath an inclement sky, and yet we are led of Amphiness, and ell, as we say in the country, well to do in the word, and these in the same of commerce were represe and leady postpure—my adent player ic, that this whole country, bound together one of this prosp

In short, wherever we turn our eyee, we see that this State is not an agricultural State, but a commercial one—a manufacturing State—a State mised on with all the interests thet belong to society; end beyond all these visible and demonstrable interests, and a vast many Yaekee notions besides, we live ueder the laws of the General Government, and should perish if those laws were abrogeted. [Applause.] Sir, you have alluded to the period in which I have pessed some portion of my life in the administration of the affeirs of the country. The years of burnee life wear away. Sir, I shell perform such service for no such other length of time; but, with every increasing yeer, and dey and hour, the more I coetemplete the hielory of this country, the great deatiny of this country—the nore I coetemplete the hielory of this country—the nore I coetemplete the see the exhibitions of sakill have astonished Europe in this one summer, [sensation] the more I see what exhibition of sakill have astonished Europe in this one summer, [sensation] the more I see what exhibition of sakill have astonished Europe, within a furtinght has stated that in every thing yaluable, in every thing that is for human improvement, the United States goes so far abead of every body else as to leave nobody else in sight. It is like the position of Jova among the gods; Jova is first and there is nu secoed. Mr. Coerad, the Secretary of War, was pre-sented to his Excellency by Hon. J. T. Stevenson sented to his Excellency by Hon J. T. Stavenson; and spoke as follows:

Mr. Gevreor—Alibough the remarks of my frieeds and follow-laborers who have just addressed you, might seem to rander it superfluous, I cannot, exertheless, resist the temptation to offer eleo the feeble exercision of my thanks, and my acknowledgments for the cordial greeting which I have received from you, and from the citizens of the State of which you are the organ, from the moment we have entered its borders. I need not assure you. Excellency that I have not the vanity to impute this warm, and I might almost as this enthusiastic greeting at your hands, to epipersonal marity of my own. Mr. Governar—My fised, who has just addressed you, discleimed for himself the title of a stranger. I think I may with equal right discleim that title. [Applause.] I heve not, it is true, the honor of coming from e State which, like Virginia, has been the pertner with Messachusetts in the perils and dangers of our Revolutian; hut, sir, I come from e State which counts among her best and most virtuous end enlightened oitizens many who ceme from both of those States. I think, sir, thet a citizen of NewOcleens may well claim some ecquaintance with the citizens of Boston. Coenceted as we sre by the lies not only of commencial relations that bind, as daily more and more closely together, I cannot feel when I treed the soil of Boston hist. I am on the soil of a loreign land, Neither is this my first viall, to your city or to your States. I have heretofore on one or two occasions, ess e private individuel, vinjoyed the hospitelities of here citizens; and I assure you that every visit thet. I make to yoer State and its beautiful capital is a sautze of hast pleasure and satisfaction. At every new visit thet I make to both I perceive new evidences of that industry, that enterprise, thet public spirit, and thet philenthropy, which mey be said to be her peculier characteristics. I see, also, new indications of continued end increasing prosperity. I need not sey to the citizens of Messachusetts, end hove all, Mr. Governor, I need not sey to you and the salightened endience which I now have the honor to eddress, how much of this prosperity is due to the preservation of the Union which the Commonwealth of Massachusetts less contributed so powerfully to establish, and which I am sure she will also, at 31 "littlines, be ear sady powerfully to assist to preserve end to meintain. All that I can now do, Mr. Governor, is to express, es I do, the sincere wish that this prosperity mey continue as long as the Union continues, end that both mey be perpetuel. [Applause.]

Mr. Conrnd's remerks were well received, and ee soon as he had concluded, Hon. C. T. Russell ennounced that in consequence of the proposed review of the military upon the Common, the President was obliged to forego the pleasure of a personal introduction to the example. troduction to the assembly. The President and suite then left the Hall emidst the cheers of this multitude and proceeded to the Common. Hs then reviewed the troops on the Common. In the evening he dined with the Cabinet, including Mr.

Lord Eigin and suite, accompanied by the Hon.

Mr. Hincks, Inspector General of Canada, assisted in Boston on Wednesdey evening. He was wel-comed by the Mayor in a glowing speech, and reblied in terms the most cordied and friendly.

The city government entertained the President and the other distinguished greets with a inturious-and clegant supper, on Wednesday evening, at the Reverse House. After the cloth was removed speeches were made by Hon. Flancis Hincks, of Lord Elgin's cabinet, Gen. Edmunds, Hon. John Howe, Provincial Secretary of Nova Scotia, Col. Vermont, Hon. Josinh Quincey, jr., Colonei Schon-ier, General Leslie Combs, of Kentneky, Honze H. Wilson, Lt. Gov. Lawrence, of R. l., and

H. Wilcon, Lt. Gov. Lawrence, of R. I., and Mayor Howes, of Forento. The President and Lord Elgin, and their respective suites, and Sir Allan McNah, were at the Mayor's mansion, in Temple street, in the course of mayors manson, in remperence when in the course of the evoning. Bishop Finantrick wee also there, and Gov. Boutwell, Mr. Walker, secretary of the common wealth, Adjutant General Stone, and Col. Needham. Moils to Mexico.—The Washington National Intelligencer understands that Mr. Henry, Skillman, of New York, entered into a contract with the Post-master General on Saturday week last, for the transportation of a monthly mail between Sauta Fe and San Elisario, via El Paso and intermediate points on the Rio Grande, a distance of some 330 miles; and also for transporting a mail every two, months between San Antono and El Paso, a distance of a bent 660 iniles. The critaens and public officers in New Mexico and Western Texes will, therefore, have a mail from the East monthly, by the way of Independence and Sunta Fe, and bi-monthly by the way of New Orleans and San Antonio, which later rente will probably be increased next year to a monthly mail. There errangements will be very welcome to all who have family or husiness relations in those distant constitutes, hitherto can off from any regular channel of correspondence. As the transportation of mails through a vast unsettled wildenness, infected by roaning hende of rude end often hostile Indians, must, to afford them proper protection, he attended with an expense far beyond enly probable receipts, the Post-master General has been induced to enter into these convacts solely, we presume, with a view to the public accommodation. As the contractor has emphasized to convey his meils, when practicelle, in a covered carriege, with relays of aingle mule teems, he will be able generally to take three or four passengers on either route, in addition to his regular guard. Mr. Skithman is, edd the Intelligencer, well known on the frontier, and highly recommended as a man of oregy, inaddition to his regular guard. Mr. Skillman is adda the latellige neer, well known on the frontier, and highly recommended as a man of onergy, intelligence and, firmness, and he is extensively known to and prespected by the findans; so that there are few men as well quelified to perform with punctuelly and success the difficult duty he has undertaken.

Unrivaled Pieno Forte Player .- We find the Count Orloff has just presented to the Emperor of Russie an extraordinary statement in the National:

Count Orloff has just presented to the Emperor of Russie an extraordinary injusted phenomenon in the preson of a young Wallachian culled Frederick Rolta. This man has been horn with four erick Rolta. Thie man has been norm with rought hends, each having ten fingers. He was brought up by n clergyman, who taught him to play on the organ, but the young man, in the course of time, made a plane forte for himself, of considerably greater power than the ordinary instruments. He made a piano forte for himself, of considerably greater power than the ordinnry instruments. He enjoys excellent lieulth, and, with the exception of his hands, presents nothing strange in his person. It is only from the elbow that the maiformation commences. The arm there divides into two limbs, each ending in a hend with a dbuble supply of fingers. These additional arms are regularly made, and the only remnrkable point observed by medical nen is the immense development of the delivid muscle at the eliminate development of the delivid muscle at the eliminate of the choulder. The clergyin art who had brought up Rolla, at his death left him his small property, and the young man immediately purchased dismond rings, with which he loaded his twenty fingers. It was with them so leaded his twenty fingers. It was with them so addrined that he performed before the Emperor of Russia, who expressed his curprise at the musical powers of the young man. Roltz, it is said, is shortly to visit Paris.

A Gamester.-Sir Robert Peel, second son of the late celebrated premier, seems to be a very different men from hie father. He is now on the condinent to escape debts meinly contracted by gambling. He is said to be a reckless huner and rider, and has the credit of being flevdted to geming and the kindred dissipations. Ha hes, however, yeary good talents.

The Christiana Trogedy.—We learn that about forty-four arreets have been made in all. Of this number, about twenty-two an a confined in the jail of Lancaster, and twenty-two in the prison of Moyameneing. The officers of the law heve been active, vigilant, and unjiring. The examination of the prisoners at Lancaster has been postponed until Theaday next. Two of the prisoners there are edd to have been ringleaders in the riot. [Baltimore Chipper, 18th inet.

Renignation.—We learn that Mr. Forward, American Chergé d'Affaires to Denmark, tendered his resignation of that office some weeks ago, and requested of the Government permission to fature home; and we understend that the President has week adopted the resignation, and directed letters of a recall to be transmitted to him; so that we presume his friends may look for his return home at ac early day. Attempt to Rob & Bank.—On Sunday night, the 14th inst., a bold attempt was made to rob the Commercial Branch Bank of Cleveland. They had entered the building through a floor above, end had made a large excavation about the vault, taking probably the whole of Sunday. They were, however, unable to complete the work, and were interrupted and fled before they got any thing valueble.

A Tyrant.—Captain Savage, of the ship Kalamasoo, has again been convicted in New York of cruelty, in an action for damages, for patting Dr. Hunter in from from the sixth of August 10 the fourthof September: The Judge decided that he should pay $450.—This is the third time that Papt. Savage has been convicted of cruelty, eaercised during one voyage of his ship from Liverpool.

Providential Escape.—Bad as rum ts, it certainly senebles its votaries to accomplish unhoused of feats that would be certain death to a coher men. An Englishman, named John Compard, yesterday, while brim full of the fine-water, cut his throat with a razer, and then threw himself from the roof of a two-story building to a shad, and from thence to the ground, without receiving any lejury that is likely to prove fatal; [Phil; Cor. The people live altogether in farm villages, and walk miles to their work. They seem not to enjoy what yon see. But in Switzerland every man lives nader his own vine. The meuntains, too, give a finish to the land tape which they have not in England. I saw one or two laborers going out to their work. Some have been unwice enough to suggest, at the present Conference, a reconsideration of the doc-trinal basic. But we feel assured that such euggoations will have no great weight with those who were gathered together in 1846, and who hoard every question argued then, which can be brought forward on this anbject. It would be a calamity to the Alliance to commence the work of reconstructing its foundation, and the very proposal to do so might discourage many from rearing the building, and alarm othera lest the Alliance, to open a door for a few of questionable orthodoxy, should close another door against many of its wisest ever cannot be done without the re-assembling of those who adopted the basis in 1846, and that basis may, happily, be onsidered a settled matter.

Up to the present Conference, the Council, though at the head of the British Alliance movement, had no power to admit to membership with the body. This anomaly has now been removed, and many, during the slttings in London, took advantage of the facility thus afforded. We are persuaded that numbers would willingly enrol themselves did they know how to go about it. An intimation, we have the following the made to any momber of the Council, or Nosoriptural corm, probably, has been more perverted from the proper signification than charity. It is sometime used synonymously with almosticing and, at other times, its import is found in an indulgent construction of conduct and motives of our fallow. #### Maturity of Grace, Flavel, in his meditations on the harvest season, gives the following three signs of the maturity of grace :

i. When the corn is near ripo, it bows the head, and stoops lower than whon it charitable will solicitously inquire they may best promote that of their humble and self-denying thau in the days of thoir profession. The longer a days of thoir profession. was green. When the people of God are near ripe for heaven, they grow more saint grows in the world, the botter still he is acquainted with his own heart, and his obligations to God; both of which are very humbling things. Paul had one foot in heavon when he called himself the chiefest of sinners and least of saints. 1 Tim, i. 15; Eph. iii. 8. . A Christian in the progress of his knowedge and grace is like a vessel cast into he soa-the more it fills the deeper it slnks.

2. When the harvest is nigh, the grain s more solid and pithy than ever it was before. Green corn is soft and spengy, but ripe cern is substantial and weighty So it is with Christians; the affectious of a young Christian, perhaps, are more fervent and sprightly; but those of a growu Christian are more judicious and selid; their leve to Christ abounds mers and more in all indement. Phil i. 9. The limbs of a child are more active and pliable; but as he grows up to a more perfect state, the parts are more consolidated and firmly knit. The fingers of an old musician are not so nim-ble; but he hath a mere judloicus car in music than in his youth.

3. When corn is dead ripe it is apt to fall of its own accord to the ground and thore shed; whereby it doth, as it were, anticipate the harvest man, and calls upon him to put in the sickle.

Not unlike to which are the lookings and longings, the groanings and haston-ings of ready Christians to their expeeted glory. They hasten to the coming of the Lord, or as Montanns mere fitly renders it, they hasten the coming of the Lord; that is, they are urgen and instant in their desires and cries to hasten his coming; their desires sally forth to meet the Lord; they willingly take death by the hand : as the eeri bends to the earth, so do these souls to Heaven. This shows thoir harvest to be near.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1851.

Keep Peace in the Family.

The Evangelical Alliance, which held ts fifth session in London, from 20th August to 3d September, has, we hope, produced good fruit on this side the Atlantic. Very fow Americans were present. It cannot be that distance was the cause of this; for the Cunard and Collins steamers have almost annihilated distance. When this ecuuion ical Conference of Christians of all tongues and kindred and people was first talked of, American Christians showed themselves as ardent, as philanthrepie and as eatholle spirited as any. They prepared for it in goodly numbers and with warm hearts. But British interforence prevailed, and " the peculiar institutions of the South " had to be discussed in the basis of Union Slaveholdors wore forbid the universal platform. Southerners then turned their back upon it fer self-respect sake. Still they were charitablo: they wished well to this well-meant action of Christendom, though fanaticism had excluded them from taking part in it. But why has the Alliance proved failuro, se far as enr Northern Christian brothren are concerned ? This question can be easily answered touching Northern Methodists. For, notwithstanding the intenso abolitionism of their leading preachers and organs; notwithstanding the rejection of a slaveholding bishop and a slaveholding preacher, and their protests against, i slavery in the abstract," they are still connected with the thing. To hold some possessions on the border, and for the liberty of oceasional invasions into Southorn territory, the M. E. Church, North, is willng to forego the sympathies and communion of the Great Alliance. On account of this sad inconsistoncy, this anti-slavery Church is forbid participation in this grand Anti-Slavery Movement-for such, in part, is the Alliance. Verily, this is paying dear for a few little border possessions. A late English papor, under the head " Evangelical Alliance and American Slavery," contains the following paragraph:

" Of the 219,563 slaves owned in the Methedist Church, the greater portion by far are owned in the Church South. The Church Nerth, however, is by ne means guiltless of the blood of the innocent. She has her churches in the South in which slaves are held, and the owners are in good standing. Dr. Dur-bin writes letters frem Philadolphia to the Virginia slaveholders, to convince in giving the Gospel to California? It them that the Church North is in no is emphatically a home work. in every way worthy of their confidence and support. And since the division of that Church, not a single Conference, quartorly or annual, to our knowledge, n the whole North, has declared slaveolding a bar to Christian communion though they have been repeatedly solicited so to do."

But there is an additional and more general roason why so few American heads, even from the North, were seen at the late gathering in Free Masen's Hall, London. The American name an imputation against his metives. Wo has waked prompt responsive ee Northern brothren-great men, preachers, editors and Doctors of Divinityhave centributed to make it se. They have joined in with British and other fereign slanderers upon the South, abused the South, aspersed the South. All this was very well while they staid find that the Southern portion of this Confederacy is too important, commercially, politically and religiously, not to rican character. They are called by growing population, among us. the names they called us; and they are impatient of the misnomer. They are accused of the things they laid to our themselves by the humiliating avorment-it was not I, but my brother of the South. They come from a quarter on which they have helped to east suspicion; and they are questioned and searched and quarantinod before they can sit down peaceably in the Alliance, or any other decent place, until they are heartily tired of it. They have defiled their own nest; and a shrewd friend at our elbow remarks, "it is a villanous bird that will do that,"

Rov. Doctor Bacon, of New Havon, nas recently felt this self-inflicted calamity, and returning fresh frem one of the meetings of the Alliance, writes home to the Independent s,s follows:

A The feeling towards America or rather towards American visitors which has been growing up for some time past iu a cortain part of the religious public of Groat Britain, is such that many Americans (and I confess myself one of the many,) would rather, avoid any collision with it. At home I so see, and con reprove and denounce, whatever in the laws and institutions of particular States, or in the policy of eur General Gevernment, is centrary to justice, or inconsistent with our boasted principles of oivil and religions froedom. But when I am on this side of the Atantio, and especially when I am in reat Britain, I am an American, nor will I admit that the name of American is a name to be ashamed of, when com .pared with any other patronymic undter heaven. Where I find myself denounce and lor suspected because I am an Amc. Ti Ab-Legate.

can, I cannot undertake to show, nor can I permit any testimony in my be-half, that I am better than Americans

That is good, and no doubt comes from the heart. Therefore we say again, what we set out with saying, that the Alliance, though a failure as far as American representation was concerned, has already produced good fruit this side of the Atlantic. It is time fer those whe have American hearts to open their eyes and change their course. Some of our Northern brethren play well into foreign hands, Wo join heartily with the Southern Presbyterian in remarking upon the abeve extract from Dr. Bacen's correspondence with the paper of which he is one of the editors

We are glad the Dector has been abroad. And now that he has made the discovery that it is no very pleasant thing to be denounced as being too foul for contact with those who cheose to say, "stand by thyself," we trust that his bowels of compassion will move with at least some slight emetions of tenderness toward his American brethcan, when he again takes hold of the editorial quill,"

As far as the Alliance is confined in its operations to what would seem its logitimate object-the uniting in bends of closer communion and fellowship all Christians who receive the Holy Soriptures as their rule of faith and practice. and hold the doctrines denominated Evangelical, those who love the Lord Jesus Christ can but contemplate it with the liveliost satisfaction. The hearts of all such beat in accord when they pray to Him that is gono up on

"One the Father is with thee, Knit us in like unity; Meke us, O uniting Son, One—as Thou and He are one!"

HEALTH OF THE CALIFORNIA MISSION ARIES.-By the steamship Georgia, advices were received from Rov. Messrs. Gober and Malone. Thoy left Panama on 12th, and arrived at San Francisco on 30th August. On the next day, Sunday, they began their mission by preaching two sermons oach, ono occuying the Methedist pulpit, the other the Baptist. They had a pleasant passage and enjoyed good health. Dr. Boring was absent from San Francisco en thoir arrival-traveling over his broad work. He will bail this help gladly. May it be but the earnest of what the M. E. Chnreh, South, will speedily do for California. The convonience and proximity of this mission to our borders appears in this: These Missionary brethren proached in the pulpits of New Orleans on the last Sabbath of July, and in the pulpits of San Fraucisco on the last Sabbath of August! Should uot the Southern Church be foremost

EXPLANATION .- The article on Class meetings by Rev. J. S. Hughes, which appeared in this paper some time since has drawn forth many others in opposition-not half of which, (for prudential reasons not want of merit;) have been oublished. One of the leading "Advoeates" copied it at the time entire, with friendly notice. Bro. Hughes thinks and able reply, but have been given to understand that the publication of the explanation in another column would be satisfactory on that point.

NEW BOOKS-BIBLES .- Mr. Ball has just received a large supply of books; charge | and they are weary of clearing among them about two thousand Ribles, of various styles-ranging in price from twenty-five cents to $50. A quaint friend suggests that some of them are so fine it would be a sin to read thom. We think not so.

> CATCHING THE DROPS .- The British Wesleyans, without the numbers and wealth of the Americans, raise annually a much greater amount of Missienary money. We extract a few items from the report of the Society, for 1851 which may give our readers some idea of how these immense sums are acoumulated

Archbishop of Baltimore. The Philadelphia Catholic Harild gives the tree version of the ator that the vacant See of Beltimore had been filled: lbet the vecant See of Beltimore had been filled:

"During the past week, various rumors have been sil custed respecting the filling of the vecant See of Baltimora, which have caused many anxious inquiring. We therefore doesn it beat to stee that autherate information has been received, that on the 22d August, His Hölinessa, Pieus IX., promoted the Bishop of this Diocese to that See, and, at the aame time, nominated him Ab-Legato to preside at the National Council, to be held next May, in the city of Baltimore. The official documents, however, have not yet heen received. Bishop Garland, who is no doubt at this time at Rome, will probably bring over the Palliom on his return.

Extemporaneous Prayer.

That a man must quit sinning or quit oraying can be affirmed, with invariable truth, we think, only of extemporaneous prayer: then the prayer and sin are both his, and cannot dwell together. Ho searches his soul for his wants and adapts his petition to his ease, as it is. This brings him into thoughtful

contact with his life and the sins which cause and aggravate his misories. "Out of his own mouth " ho is coudemned. When one has to put words into sentences for himself before his Maker, he is apt to know what they mean. The solemn-act can hardly fail to awaken a consciousness, more or less Intenso, of spiritual experience. Though the words. be inclegant and the meaning inadequate, still it is better than words well shosen at the imminent risk of no meaning at all. The liturgy of the Episcopal Church is usually highly lauded in the papers of that Church. A controversy has been geing on in the Western Episoopalian, for some time past, as to whether extemporaneous prayer is admissible in any social worship. Tho oditor, who seems to favor its use under some oircumstances, makes the following significant remark: "It is a remarkable fact, that the dangerous system of error which now most besets the Church, has not, in a single instance, coalosced with extemporo prayer or prayer meetings. We never find thom coexisting in the same congregation. Their antagonism seems to be so invetrate, that the entrance of the one is invariably the death of the other."

Baptists-The Name.

A writer in the Roligious Horald (Va.) objects strengly to the following paragraph, found in Dwight's Theology, 4th vol. He thinks the reputation of the author would be helpod by sweeping his pages clear of it:

"These porsons, originally styled Ana-baptists and Anti-pedo-baptists, have claimed to themselves impreperly the title of Baptists, indicating that they only baptized, or were baptized, in a manner agreeable to the scriptural directions on this subject. While, therefore, I obcorfully acknowledge the distinguished piety and respectability of a considerable number of med in this class of Christians, particularly in Great Britain, I protest against their assumption of this name, se far as it is intended to indicate, that others do not baptize, and are not baptized, agreeably to the principles of the Gospel. I acknowledge freely their right to their ewn principles. But their right to conclude, or to assert, that the point in debate betwoon us and them, is settled in their favor, I neither admit ner believe. The name Ana-baptists, eriginally given to them because they re-baptized those who had received baptism in infancy, is an appellation in overy view loss objec-

The California Mission.

The people seem to "have a mind to that the animadversions of Dr. Hamilton were semewhat personal and carried the Superintendent and his colleagues an imputation against his metives. We has waked prompt responsive echoos throughout the entire Church. One of the Bishops has givou his epinion of the 'day School man," and I could almost plan "as being at once beld, prudent and oconomical." We present bolow, from the N. aud L. Christian Advocate of 25th September, the action of the Missionary Board - Bishop Paine in the Chair.

Resolutions of the Missionary Board. adopted Saturday, Sept. 13, 1851:

1. Resolved, That this Board recognizes with pleasure and approval, tho premising and wiso plan of our Missionaries in California, for the larger extension of the interests of the mission, and the early organization of the "Paeific Annual Cenference," as set forth in their late address to the bisheps, ministers and members of the Methedist Episcopal Church, South. 2. That in furtherance of said plan, the Beard earnestly recommends that each of the Annual Conferences shall at their appreaching sessions, select and present to Bishop Paine, for his acceptance and appointment, (so far as the Bishop may approve the plan and the men selected,) such members from their respective bodies (one from each,) as they may be able fully to recommend; the persons se selected to be (as a matter of course,) from those whe are in full itinerant councetion, and whe are entirely willing to go; provided, never-theless, that the whole number of Mis-slonaries to that field of labor shall not exceed the number of Annual Conferences embraced in the Methodist Episcepal Church, South. That the Beard especially approves that the blan, which makes it the daty of each of the persons as se-lected and appointed, before starting for their distant field of labor, to raise within the limits of their own Conforencos respectively, for their individual outfit and the farther purposes of the Mission, the sum of one thousand dollars: fully believing this to he a very excellent conception and the most feasiblo and ready method of realizing the means for the accomplishment of tho

4. That cach of the Missionaries so selected and appointed be required of their arrival in California, to pay over te Dr. Boring, (the Superintendent,) for the benefit of the California mission fund, all surplus money which may remain, from their collections, after, defraying their expenses to that country; and that they make a full report to this Board as soon as practicable after their l arrival there, embraoing the amounts collected, the amounts expended, and the amounts paid ever to the Snperin-tendent of the Mission, through Rev.

Dr. Schon, Missionary Scoretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Scuth. 5. That the preachers in the several Conferences be requested to aid the Missionarios in making their collections. C. B. PAREONS, E. STEVENSON, J. H. LINN.

Revs. J. Hamilton and J. S. Hughes.

Mr. Editor-I have received a private note frem Brother Hughes, in which he complains that I have done him injustice in the animadversions I published upon his article en class meetlugs. I regret he should think so, as I did not intend to do him injustice, er impugn his metives, and I take this method to disabuse the minds of any of your readers whe may have misnader-stood me. I did not impute te Br. II: any wrong motives, at least any corrupt ones. I did intimate that he had been tempted; of this fact I think his article affords ample preef. But, then, I admitted that I had been also in my time. I also said, " we wish to retain persons in the Church who are unfit to persons in the Church who are unnt to remain, because we wish the Denefit of their purses or positions," etc. Here is nething personal to Br. Hughes, for I use the term "we," applying the consure, so far as it goes, to members; and "we!" is in the first person. But the sentence fellowing shews that I did not refer to personal profit, but to the respectability of wealth. And it seems impossible that Br. H. could have understood it in any other sense. I think the public will say that there is nothing effensive er unchristianly personal in the article; if it dees not, I ask the public's pardon, and Brother Hughes', too, for laying myself liable to be mis-understood, and assure both that they have misunderstood me. Mr. Editor. I am yours and Brother Hughes', in the best of bonds, and with the best ef feelings, but strongly in favor of the J. HAMILTON. Mobile, Oct. 6, 1851.

For the N. O. Christine Advocate. No Chance for an American.

Mr. Editor-Several months since hile Bishop Hughes was yet in Reme, many of the secular papers were inform ing the country that he was to be made a Cardinal, and several Catholic papers stating that it had been done. I stated publicly through your columns that such was not the fact; and would not be. Now who was right, Catholics, who spoke from reliable information from Reme itself, as they affirmed, or I, who spoke merely from a knowledge of the system and the character of its rulers? A knowledge of the character of Romanism and its principles is a much better index of what it will de in any case, than the promise or pledge of its man agers. If your readers will learn the true reason why Mr. Hughes was not oreated a Cardinal, they will know more of Romanism than they now do. Mobile, October, 1851.

Send us a Sunday School Man."

An official member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, remarked that he intended to send a message to next Conference to "send to the station with which he was connected a Sunday School We have heard much of applications from various churches for "taleuted ministers," " smart men," etc., but here opted by many churches of different denominations. Yes! " Send us a Sungnarantee that every thing will go right in that pastorate, for a paster whose heart is in the Sunday School work may truly be said to be a man with his hear in the right place. Take eare of the lambs of the flock, and that fleek is sure to prosper. LAIKES. Texos, Oct. 4, 1851.

Literary Notices.

Harper's Monthly, for October. Has been received. We object to one feature la its literary summary-not what is in it, but what is not in it. The Commencement enercises of overy College, North, of any standing, have been no ticed flatturingly, and spread out into interesting details. Have we no literary institutions in the South worthy of mention? It would seem from this Monthly, which generally notices every thing of the kind worth noticing, that we have none, n not one. Why such slighting omission, if this Magazine courts Southern circulation? We no-ticed it in the Augustand September numbers, and loped to see it remedied in the October, but have een disappointed. We would call the attention fact, by no means a trifling one, under the head of "Monthly Record of Current Events." Of the substantial literary merite of the Magazine, ou colimate is unahated. The leading article in the present number is by Abbott, on Napolaon Bona parie. The General of the Army of Italy is presented in the most favorable view, not only ac a political and military tactician, but as a moralist-It is the most interesting record of that chapter in Vapoleon's history we have ever met with. He la most plausility cleared of the abuse heeped upon thin hunntifully for having levied tribute upon the picture galleries of the conquered. At a time of revival of religion at one At a time of revival of religion at one of our Seminarios, many was expressing the conviction of being great sinners. Mr. S.—, one of the student, remarked freely, that such expressions were nensense. It so happened at a religious conference, Professor I. religious conference, Processor II—said that the most moral person, if converted, uever did nny thing good in the sight of God. With this saying Mr. S—was much dissatisfied, and went home to his room determined to see it had not done more good dead the he had net dene more good deeds than bad ones. He took a slate and made marks on the one side for his bad deeds intending te do the same on the oth-side for his good ones. He began in his sins, and set them dewn as fast a they occurred to his mind; they to pressed upon his mind that he could be think of one good deed, that was a ceptable to God; and he continued the eeptable to God; and no continued the ceunt of his sins till one side of the slate was filled, without finding any good in him to effect. He therefore relectantly determined to return bosse. The Advance called at the Greenland ports, where she obtained full supplies of fresh meats, vegetables, fmits, etc., and Dr. Kane acon had the happiness of seeing the scurry entirely disappeer. Captain Dellaven's was the most severe attack, and afforded a singular illustration of one of the peculiar features of the disease. A small wound on his finger, ninde when a schoelboy by a hlow from a cume, and many years ago completely healed and forgetten, was re-opened by the disease. A smilar resolt altended a wound which Dr. Kane received in the Mexican war, and indeed every man exhibited a similar illustration of this phase of the disease.

Liberty.—It is not in a splendid government, aupported by powerful monopolies and aristocratical establishments, that the people flud their hapisuess or liberty-protector but a plain system, wold of all pomp—protecting all and granting favors to none—dispensing its blessings like the dews of heaven, unseen and unfelt, save in the freshness and beauty they contribute to produce.

Fidelity.—Naver forsako a friend. When eac-mies galber around, when sickness falls on the hearl, when the world is dark and cheerless, is the imm-to try, troe friendship. The heart that has been touched will redouble its efforts when the inin-to try, troe friendship. The heart that has been touched will redouble its elforts when the friend is and or in trouble. Adversity tries true friendship. They who turn from the acene of diatragas betray their hypocrisy, and prova that interest only moves them. If, you have a friend who leves yoo, who hes atudied your interest and happiness, he acre you austain him in adversity. Let him feel that his former kindness is appreciated, that his love was not thrown away. Real fidelity may be rare, but exists in the ligart. Who has not seen and felt in power? They ooly deny its worth and pewer who have never either loved a friend or labored to make him happy. The good and kind, the affection the and virtoous, see end feel the heavenly principle. They would sacrifice weulth and happiness to promote the happiness of others, and in return they receive the reward af the love of sympathising hearts and countless favors, when they have been brought low by dialruss and adversity.

Henor.—Mr. Pennant, in his Tour in Scotlend, relutes the following circumstance, which shows that a sense of honer may prevail, in those who have little fregard to mural obligations. After the lattle of Culioden, in the yeer 1745, a teward of thirty thousand pounds was offered to any one who should discover ur deliver up the young Pretender. He had taken refuge with the Kennedys, two common thevers, who protected him with the greatest hilelity; robbed for his support, and often went in disguise to laverness to purchese provisions for him. A considerable time afterward, we were him. A considerable this afterward, one of the nish, who resisted the temptellon of thirty thousand portrils from a regard to his fornor, was hanged for stealing e cow of the value of thirty shillings.

A instried gentleman, every tinic he met the father, of his wife, complained to him of the ugly temper and disposition of his daoghter. At limit, upon one occasion, the old gentleman heentning weary of the gramblings of chia son, in-law, exclaimed, "You ore right; also is an imperiment jade, and if hear any more complaints of her, I will disinherit her." The husband, stade no traine complaints.

Outrus (S. C.) College, Sept. 80, 186t.

Messrs. Editors—On yestarday evoning we had an interesting arillabilition of the Aurora Borealis in our Northern heavons. It first attracted my attention aribut seven colored. The light atreamed up from the horizon is beautiful coruscations of a crimson color: now in pyramidal forms, and occation about eyen o'clock. The light atreamed up from the hoften it beautiful beruscations of a crimson color; now in pyramidal farms, end occasionally in broad flakes, extanding from the east-of the constellation of Perseus beyond the tail of Uras Mujor. The light would constimes shoot to an altitude of fifty degrees, presenting at the hase a bright crepusculous appearance, and, in its progress towards the zenith, changing first to a yellowish that and then to a crimsou. At a late hour the Aurora dismissed its changeable appearance, and settled into a hright it willight, which gradually faded out between II and midnight.

This singular phenomenon usually makes its appearance in the winter season and in frosty weather. Although the evanings have been cool; yet it is scarcely a time of the year when; in this latitude, we might look for this beautiful and sometimes startling phenomenon.

Various explanations of this peculiar meteor have been suggested. Some suppose it to be caused by the zodiacal light, which M. da Mairan considers the sun's atmosphere. But most philosophias seek its application in the ordineiplas of electricity, where, I huva no denbt, it is to be found.

As the Aurora sometimes makes its appearance for several successive evenings, I send you this brief notice, that the attention of our citizens may be turned to it.

The Influence of Music.—Thera is a strange, unascountabla, and dresmlike beauty in music, which can subdue the proudest spirit, and gliding into the hush of tha heart, will negate there, stilling its most tremulous throbbings, and filling it with the calm, peaceful memories of the far long sgo.

All tribes, in all times have owned the spell, from tha tima when Pan first taught the Thraeian shapherd to cerve his love-notes in the invisible air, and fill the summer nights with softest, sweetest flute music, down to the present moment. It is the universal language of all and awokening strange pulsetions even in the most obdurste heart. Most of us have experienced the luxnry of tears, when listening to an old bellad. We know an old man who, having led a long career of vice and crime, was at length banished from the country; and who, while undergoing his period of bacishment-amidat the wilds and jungles of a distant land, heard, in the summer eventifier, a sweet voice, singing in his own language the very song which hod hulled him to his, infant slember, wheo he knew crime by neure, and knew it only to abhor. It hudsbeen wong, too, by the credle of an infant sister, a little one who had died young and was now in heaven; the mother, too, was no more. But the soeg—the old song had not lost its influence over him yet. Back came trooping apon him the old memories which had, so long slumbered down there in the unconsumed depths of his heart; the mother and father; the flousehold gatherings; the old books; the old school-house; the time-worn cliureh, half-hiddea by the old yew trees, where had first heard the Bible read, all came back upon him as fresh as if it were but yesterday, and overpowered by his feelings, he gave, went to them in u flood of tears. And then the old man grew calm, and his latter days, were his bast days; and overpowered by his feelings, he gave, went to them in u flood of tears. And then the old man grew calm, and his latter days

We wish every usage not explicitly laid down in the Bible, or plainly inferable therefrom, to be submitted to the able therefrom, to be submitted to the test of reason and common sense, and jndged according to the excess of light which we enjoy above its originators. No human form is to be considered inviolable. The spirit which it embodies is also secred. If that spirit can be embodied in a better form—a form through which it can more successfully impress and influence the world, why, in through which it can more successfully the name of common sense, let us oast the old ones to the bats and owls, and adopt the new as speedily as possible.

Brethren may discard these notions if they choose, and stand still in what they are pleased to call "the old paths," but they will speedily find their church diminishing in influence, her candle sticks removed and her glery departed. We respect both the opinions and persons of many of these; for, long have they toiled and deeply do they feel for the success of the church. Yet in many things do we differ from them. ceasing, "that llo will sand laborers into his harvest."

A word has become current among ns -TRANSFERS. We fear it is blinding the eyes of the Church to the only and true source whence the ministry must be supplied and replenished. The people survey the field that stretches out about them, and are moved at the scaroity of laborers. The prospect betokens a famine of the Word and Ordinances of God. What do they do? Too oftnn, instead of looking up to heaven, their eves arn oast over to the adjoining Conferences. The Texas Conferences look to Louisiana and Missisly new emergencies to meet. Preachers after His own heart, men that "know the We want no "pewed churches," no or wants of the times" and the place, are gans, fiddles, or other artificial instruraised up there.

The transfer system gives but tempo rary relief. To use a homely adage, "It is robbing Peter to pay Paul." It is not the true principle of supply, and upon it the Church would soon fail. The Bishops may sond those at their disposal to and fro over Annual Conference lines, but the Lord must send in the first instance. Other Chnrehes, also, are exercised on this subject. The Protestant Churchman, Episcopal, says:

By the good providence of God, have ended the editorial labors of one year, and have striven to approve our fourth having been fluished in Louisille, Kentucky, without our supervisiou. With a due appreciation of the difficulty of the undertaking and an unuffected diffidence of our sufficiency, we entered upon the task; and the results are before the great reading public of the Church; a tribunal hefore which any man may feel a sentiment of awe, boti on account of its magnitude and intelli zence. So far as we have ascertained ts opinion of our fidelity, it has been decidedly encouraging. Vory many testimonials of approbation have reached us, and cheering words have nerved our humble undeavors, under the combined responsibilities of a pastoral charge and of an editor. Wo submit to our readers a few condensed suggestions, after the experience of one year in tho managoment of the Review.

1. Such a publication, properly con

imp-meeting in Louisiana-First Impressions The Rural Pulpits—Adoptedness of Christiania — Autumnal Gathering of Souls—Red River, Mr. Editor—The Impressions of a povice are sometimes interesting, net because they are formed by things new to others, but simply because they are made by things new to himself. There is a novelty in first impressions which does not belong to our after and mere. mature reflections; and whilst the latter may be more correct, the former are more entertaining.

I had often heard of Camp Meetings, but I had never seen one until recently After obtaining a pretty good account of the whereabouts and geography of the event, I adventured upon the exps. dition. Leaving town after an early breakfust, Phrrived at the Bozier Camp Ground about uoon—distant twenty forest preacher were the first sounds that greeted my cars. In the center of a little village of rude, but comfortable cabins, (tents would be a misnomer,) an arbor, partly natural and partly artificial, was situated, under which a goodly company were seated, listening to the Word of Life. Unseen I checked my approach, and paused to enjoy a prospective of primitive evangelism. text that the occasion suggested to my thoughts, was "God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must wership him in spirit and in truth." This was nei, ther-Gorizim nor Jerusalem, but it was Bethel nevertheless, I saw before me an example of Divine worship, emancipated 'm' the trammels of ferms and the outervances of times and places. Though no column nor arch nor portion was visible, yet I could not but feel that this was God's tomple, and that I was beholding his true worship. The azure reefed sky like Deity, self-suspended, hung over us; and Nature's celonmere stately than Corinthian mould, and more beautiful than Doric chiseling, stood around in giant groups, extending their generous branches like massive capitals, upon which, if need be, the bending heavens might repose. It reminded mo of the scenes of our Saviour's teachings, and the circumstances under which many of the Apestolie discourses were delivered. It also recalled the early history of Methodism, and the names of her distinguished field preachers. The rural pulpit is the light artillery of Gospel warfare. Readily brought iuto action, and admirably adapting itself to circumstances, it tells with lasting effect upon points which could not be reached through the instrumentality of church and chapel ministrations. Here I saw the peculiar adaptation of Christianity te man as the religion of the world. It finds a rostrum and au altar every where. Christ taught upen a mountain, a well curb, the sea shoro and the deck of a tisher's boat. With the samo felicitous independence, evaugelists of every age have occupied the field of the world, and have sowed heside all waters." Whilst the aggressive capacity of our religion is mainy to he attributed to its Divine origin and support, yet it is net unlikely, nay, it is most certain, that its power of ag-grossion is greatly enhanced by this simging it. Here I hegan to realize the truthful.

ness of Dr. Dixon's ebservatious uron the philosophy of Camp Meetings. The turned to religious account. Nature animates the devotional. The Christian can never look upon her gorgeous scenes, and read her varied pages, larded with beauty and sublimity as they are, without being made letter and happier. At was apparent from this letter, and it was subsequently distinctly stated by Van Nies, that whet Burr required, was a general disavowal on the part of Hamiton, of any intention, in any conversation he might ever have held, to convey impressions derogatory to the honor of Burr.

he might ever have held, to convey impressions deregatory to the honor of Burr.

Granting Burr's right to make this extraordinary inquisition into Hamilton's confidential convenations and correspondence, it would have been quite out of the question for Hamilton to make any such disavowal. His practice as a lawyer had given him full lingth into Burr's awinding pecuniary transactions, and be had long regarded him, in his private as well as his political character, as a consummate villain, as rockless and unprincipled as he was cool, audacious, and cotarprising—an equation which he had found frequent occasion to expense more or less distinctly while warning, his federal friends against the arts of Burr.

Desirous, howaver, to deprive Burr of any positions, Hamilton caused a paper to be transmitted to him, through Tendiston, a brother lawyer, who cannot as his friend in this materiate to the effect thirt, if properly addressed—for Burr's second latter was considered too insuffing to admit of a reply—lie of the willing to rate that the convention all to by Dr. Cooper, so far as he could recall the way wholly in relation to politics, and did not cock and the private cheracter; nor should he heritals to make an equally prompt avoyard or disavowal to any other particular and specific conversation as to which he might be questioned.

It was insisted, however, on Hamiton's part, as the Federal Circuit Court was in season, in which he had many unportant cases, that the meeting shoold be poatponed till the court was over, since ho was not willing, by any act of the, to expose his chefits to embarranen, loss, or delay.

By yesterday morning's mail we recaired the full particulars of the news from California, brought by the Promethena. It is six days later ple topic was the probable result of the State and Congressional elections The following summary just now to pursua this subject, but we do not mean to give up the ship."

It is singular that the papers contain not a line of intelligent speculation relative to the result in the Congressional electrons. The whig Congressional ticket seems to have run entirely ahead of the legislative, end but little behind Major Reading. The inducations are that E. J. C. Kewen and J. R. Moore (whige) are elected, eithough the latter runs a little behind his colleague. The Alta of the 6th fayors the opinion that the democratic candilletes are elected; the received returns, however, lead in the behind the Congressional will go with the Stataticket.

The political complexion of the Legislature is emetter of much interest, because it will devolve on them to choose a United Statas Senator, in place of Col. Fremout, whose term expired on the 4th March last.

That a democrat will succeed Col. Fremout nean to give up the ship.

place of Col. Fremout, whose term expired on the 4th March last.

That a democrat will succeed Col. Fremoul seems very probable. The most prominent caudidates of the party are Solieman Heylenfield (if not relected Judga of the Supreme Court) and John B. Weller, formerly et Onio. Unless the political horizon chenges very much within a few months, Weller stands, the best chance of election. Col. Fremont is "flowhere," end will herdly have a vale—much less a chance of auccesa.

Jack Hays, of Texan Ranger notoriety, an independent whig, is apparently elected Sheriff of Sen Frencisco. The whiga of Sen Francisco have elected one members of the Assembly.

We had previously decided, however, to remain at Raushout, that we might be afforded an opportunity of visiting the fiel-famed Valhalla, one of the greatest works of modern times. It was commenced in 1830 and completed in 1842. It is a Grecian Temple of the Deric order in the colossal proportions of the Parthenon, at Athens, and is situated upon a commanding enfinence, 300 feet in height, the foot of which is sweep by the Dannbe, a situation very usual resembling in point of elecsituated upon a commanding eminence, soo ree in height, the foot of which is awept by the Dannhe, n situation very ruch resembling in point of elevation, that of the Parthenon, itself. It was hull by the ex-King Louis of Bavaria, and is intended as a Trumple of Fame for Germany, very mich resembling in this respect, the one now in process of creedlon in the sathurbs of Munich me described to you in my last lotter. In it have been placed the busis executed in the beautiful marble of Corman, of many of the worthies of Germany, whose likenesses have been transmitted down to the present time. Others of whom there are no likenesses extant, any commemorated by bronze tablets, on which their cauties, etc., are inseribed, which are placed upon the walls. They embrace her heroes, statesment, sages, poets, artists, musicana, etc., from Arimnias the conqueror of the Romans, down to Blucher and Schwartzeiberg, among the warriors, and-from the certy incisite singers, down to Goethe, Schiller and the pacts of the present day. The chief sculptors of Germany have exerted their talens in prepariog decorations for the exterior and pavet, and the sides fined with polished marble of different redors, from the neighborhood of Baireuth and Sabzburg. Six exquisitely executed figures of Victory adoric the sides, placed upan pedestals, sculpaired in white marble, by Rauch, but the in-terior decorations themselves are entirely too and mergus for me to attempt a description of them. Altogether, this wonderful Temple seems to be ad-inited, if we may judge from the converte works. Altogether, this wonderful Temple seems to be admitted, if we may judge from the remarks made in the obum by visitors who have come from all parts of the world, to exceed only thing of the kind which has been reared in modern times. A carriage road has been constructed from the village of Domestahet, which winds round to the rear of the temple. The view from the platform in front of the temple is most striking, extending ras it does over the flat plains of Bavaria to the for-distant snowy neaks of the Alps of Tyrol. The effect of the whole scenu, especially as you view it on descending the river, is very much improved by the dork woods which cover the munutains to the North, and set off the temple to the greatest advantage.

The old castle of Stauf, now in ruins, which overhangs the village of Domanstabet, opposite to and about a mile above the Vallalla, has, in its time, been the scene of many severe contesta, and of various fortunes—it is now, with the land and its environs, in possession of the Prince of Tours and Taxis, who has a handsome paluce on the banks of the river near to it, where he passes the aummer montha.

Whatever may ho the truth in respeet to the real origin and authorship of the hook of Mormon, there can be ne doubt of its wouderful adaptedness to the purposes to which it has been applied. We can not agree with these who would deny to the work either gen-ius or talent. The Koran bears with it that prestige of antiquity which always insures some degree of respect.
It is written in a dead, and what is new regarded a learned language. It has its briental imagery, together with frequent allusions to what most interests us in Oriental romance. Above all, it has had its centuries of scholiasts and commentators, extracting the arema as well as tno dust of its assumed divinity. In short, thore is ahout it a show o learning and "venerable antiquity," and yet we do not hesitate to say it, Joe Smith, or whoover was its author, has mado a hock superior to that of the Arahian prophet; deeper in its philosophy pursr in its morality, and far mere original. There are, doubtloss, many faults both of style and language; but centuriss hence may convert these into pro-oious archaisms, and give to the bad Angle-Saxon of the Mormon book all the interest which ages of scholiasts have imparted to what was oneo the irregular Arabic of the rude tribes of the Mormonism.

In the extreme western portion of the North American National Confederacy, there are new to be found, growing side by side, two of tue most singular phenomes of the age. We allude to the new social and political organization, constituting the State of California, and the new theoracy, as it is assumed to be, of the Mormon Mormonism, it is the disposition manifested in soms parts, of this philosophical, and the new theoracy, as it is assumed to be, of the Mormon Commonwealth or Church—the one the most decidedly secular of all known modern enterprises, the other the only example of the rise of a new religious people in the 19th century. He thinks they all require the light of science te dispel the gleem of their intellectual night, and the glorious light of the Gospel "to shine in their hearts, to give the light of the knewledge of the glery of Ged in the face of Jesus Christ."

The design of this paper is to invite attention to this section of country. If fully and irreversibly enacted by the local churchs—caste the local churches—caste the local churches—caste, and the Church should sosk to sanctify them and turn them to its own that the good sonse of the church advantage. The policy which disclains to do so may be more feolish than humble that all opposition to such a ccurse to all classes; it is onr epinion that it may bless the king on the throne, as any rate, it is unquestionably true that this will be the practical law of the Church, and that it has already heen principles of it for either, we would one teneded a single cosmital.

1. It may be affirmed that we could not so roadily build chapsis, especially in cortain sections of the country, with "free sittings" as with pews. This is particularly the oase in New England, and also in all our large cities. It was precisely this necessity that led to the introduction. Our free churches (for we attempted them at first) were but skoletens—occlesiastical harns—and it was found impossible to huild them otherwise till the motive of making the contributors proprietors by the owner that the demonstrated by facts that was found impossible to huild them otherwise till the motive of making the contributors proprietors by the ownership of pews, was offered. Is it not decirable to retain them under our juffuence? Should it not be a matter of solicitude with their Methodist parents to retain them where it is believed they will most likely be brought to the experi the saving graps of Ged? And if the provision of a suitable preportion of chapels adapted to "family slttings" will tend to this end, shall a mere question of oxpedishey hs set off against an advantage of such moment?

Not only do we less onr own youth and their families thus, but we fall for the same reason, to no small extent, to gather in emeng us a large class of population which, it brought under our inlluence, might be of great value to us and to the cause of Ged in general. It is very oasy to answer summarily that the class alluded to are proud, self-con-ceited, worldly, etc. While there may he some truth in the remark, there are reasens enough why, if hy conceding a point of more expediency like this, we can secure them to the saving agencies of our cause, we should make the conwealth and public position have their dangers to piety, they must nevertheless exist, and the Church should sosk to

There is no doubt but the General Conference has power over the settletion. But as no docine nor essential discipline is involved, so whole matter is one of expediency; and should therefore, in our humble inion, be congregational rather than al in its final determination, at any given place or time.

the nettlement of this question might ly and properly be left, we will make stion that it is unwise and unitable for any membership or congregation to start the question " pews or no pews" in a chapel or meeting-house was not settled before the first brick was laid in mortar, or the first nail driven, it is too late now to bring pews in, under any pretence; and the pastor of ch a church will avoid its agitation as would avoid plague and pestilence. Where nothing is said to the contrary, usage governs, and free seats are under-stood. All will not agree to the subsent proposition, and the majority, in mblest minority. The poor manntributed a few dollars, has vestights in the free seated Church no majority can righteously des him of. The last pewed church in the bounds of the M. E. CONFERENCE, APOLOGIES, ETC. - By the time the present and next issue of the New Orleans Advocate resches our subscribers in Texas and Arkansas, the most of their preachers will be at, or on their way to the seat of Conference. We fear we shall not be able to fulfill the expectations we have ventured to cherish for the most of the year, of being with them. Besides the absence of one of our pastoral colleagues, and the lack pro tem. to commit our edit-or's decies to for the trip, the ways of travel to their Conference seats happen to be sadly ont of fix." [See letter of

Rov. D. S. Watkins.] We leave the interests of the New Orleans Advocate to their keeping without any special representation. It has found its way to most of them during the year, and would have found its way to all, could we have ascertained what point in their wide parishes they ealled home. This matter, we trust will be set with by favoring us with a copy of the post offices of all the preachers. We hope our correspondents willnot forget to farnish us early with Conference news.

Ily the overland mall at Trieste, we have dates from Bombay to the 18 huf September. The commercial naws is favorable. This outbreak of Cashmere has been suppressed. Agreed quantity of rain has fallen in Seinde and the Punjaub, causing an inundation from which great less of life and pruparty has resulted.

Fraude to the amount of £70,000 have been discovered in the optum department of Bombay?

An expedition is fitting out against the Araba shout Aden. Gold is abundant, and the import trade large.

trade large. MISCELLANKOUS. The Paris papers which are most hable to persecution have but upon an excellent plan of disseminating liberal principles. It eseems that sevaral mambers of the pussent government ware formarly republishar, and these stats journals tow publish artrarts from their old speeches and books as aditorial trarts from their old speechea and booke as addornal leaders.

We find this word "lengthy" used five times in different London papers now before us; yet the reviewe call it an Americanism.

The English papers generally nutlee the death of James Ferlimote Cooper.

An arricle pre a little journal published by M. de Lamartine has a sciled some sometion. To a lamous tation over the indifference of the multitude, he intimates his injention of retiring from public life.

Lamartine's proce to so poetical that it is difficult.

would be worth little if it was not a preparation for practice. The astronomer and the chemist would put little force into their studies, if it was certaln that they must leave off in four of live years, and do nothing for the rast of their livas; and no man could possibly feel much interest in political and social morels if he knew that he must, all his life bug, pay takes, but neither speak nor move about public affairs.

Women, like men, must be educated with a view to action, or their studies cannot be called education; and no judgement can be formed of the scope of their, faculties. The pursuit must be the life's husiness or it will be mere pagains or irksome talk. This was always my point of difference with one who carefully cherished a revarence for womanistic late Dr. Chamiling. How much we spoke and wrote of the old controversy—Inflanance as. Office! Ha would have any woman study anything that her faculties led her to, whether physical schene or law, government and political economy; but he would have had her sup at the study from the moment slie entered the bospital, as physician and not nurse; from the moment ahe took her pince in a court of justice, in the jury bor and not the witness hox; from the moment ahe Brought her mind and her vurce into the Legislatura, insiesd of discussing the principles of laws at homs; from the moment als announced and administred justice, insteal of iooking inpon it from afar, as a thing with which she had no concern, slie would, he feared, lose her influence, as an observing intelligence standing by in e site of purity. "unspotted from the world."

My conviction always was, that an istelligence, never excised out into cation, could not be worth much; and that if all the action of human life was of a character so tainted as to be enfit for woman, it could be no better for maa, and we eight, all to sit down together, and let barbarism overtake us once more. My uwn conviction is, that the activation; not only the mind and hely ow would be a purity. The highest and purest

Is regard to this old controversy—of influence so olice—it appears to me that if influence is good and olice is bad for human morals and obaracter, mae's present position is one of such hard-sbip as it is almost profane to contemplate, and if, on the contrary, office is good and a life of influence is bad, woman hea an instant right to claim that her position he acceaded. With every wish that your meeting mey be a happy one, and your great cause a flourishing one, Land, deer madam, Your feithfolly.

Real fittate in Washington.—The Talagraph-bas the fellowing.

"It was only a low years ago thet John A. Smith, Esq. tha respected and accomplished olerk of oar District Court, purchased for six thousand dollars a small ferm, a little bayond the pracincts of this city. A most veluable apring upon it soon becams desirable to the Government, the waters of which might be coavayed to the Capitol, and for this apring Mr. Smith received, twenty thousand dollars. The labors of the compulsion to select a site for a National Military Asylom have blood, and, in pursuance of its recommendation of the Smith will receive for his farm forty thousand in the computation of the commendation of the commendation.

For the N. O. Christiso Advocate German Missions.

The first German mission in the Methodist Episoopal Church in America, was established in the year 1835, in the city of Cincinnati. The Rev. Wm. Nast was the first German missionary. Brother Nast was a native of Germanyand had spent seven or eight years pro, vious to his entoring the ministry among the English. During n great part of this time he was engaged as Protessor of Ancient Languages in a Col-lege, and of course had very little coon-sion te use his nativo language. This want of practice, for so long a time, made it difficult for him, in the commencement of his work, to preach in his mother tongue. His first year in Cincinnuti gave us no great promiso to the furtherano-of the work. He became somewhat discouraged of the mission in Cincinnati. At the session of the Ohio Conference, in the autumn of 1836, he was appointed to travel in the bounds of Columbus Dist. Ohio Conference ence. During this year he traveled several hundred miles, over a large extent of country, visiting the different German settlements within the hounds of his oironit every five wocks. Though the number of conversions this year was not grent, yot it was sulliciontly large to encourage him to hope for tho salvation of many of his countrymen.

Some of the fruits of this year's labor-remain chining lights unto thic day. In the autumn of 1837, Bro. Nast was reappointed to Cincinnati. This year his labors were orowned with greater success, than they had herotofore been. The prejudices against him were a tot se atrong, his hearers gradually iner, eased, and at the close of the year a con, siderable number attended on his ministry; and at the ousning Conforence he reported twenty-six members in ginning for a mission in Carrollton. Judge Preston denated a lot to the mission, and they built a small frame chapel on it. The work went on prospering. Ministerial help was much wanted. About this time, a certain Charles Charlee Reihly volunteered for the South. He came in the spring of 1847, from the East, being recommended from hrethron in high standing. He was reocived with open arms by preachers and poople. The sickly and broken down Bromer theu made another journey to Gineinnati, in order to recruit his health. He had not been there long, however, when one bad report after another reached him from his beleved miseionary field. Reihly being now maeter of the house, made bad use of his nuthority. He was full of pride, always beasting of his pre-eminency, because he had received a partial college education in the old country-himsolf inexperienced in church government, was not willing, however, that those should govern who were inferior to him in learnng, but older in the ministry. Bromer, after hearing these rumors, could rest no longer in Cineinnati-it was too painful for him to see his hard missionary labors thus wasted and ruined. Orleans; on urriving, ho found things uruth out of order. Reihly was to labor in the first mission, and Brother B.

The society of the lirst mission being much out of order, through the ill behavior of Reihly, applied to the Rev. P. Schunuker for assistance. Brother Sohmuker was at that time P. E. over a large Gorman District in the Ohio Conference. Having assisted to establish the mission, he felt much interested in the progress. He accordingly capital wards of a thousand. And a moralist.

AN INGENIOUS PRODUCTION

The fellowing graphs described of the control of the con With this society bogins the history of Methodism among the Germans.

The first Gorman mission in the South was established in New Orleans in the year 1842. The Rev. Charles Bremer year 1842. The Rev. Charles Bremer and harmony during the year, and it was the first missionary. Bro. Bremer immigrated to this country in 1837.

Belder thought it best to dissolve the to hear the wisdom of Solemon.

Now, this man, so mightily endowed; if you add to his intellectual elevation the pedestal of his raro good fortner, monuting the genins of the sage on the throne of the sovereign—this peopless wan this prime specimen of humanity

Being now left all alone in the German mission in the prime of life at the time, he entered the ministry. If I am not mistaken, he joined the Conference in 1843 or '44—from that time unte the day of his death, he labored without any intermission in the city as German missionary. The Lord gave him many seals to his ministry. In the year 1845, he received an assistant in Rov. Nicholas Brikwedel. They then made a beginning for a mission in Carrollton.

Being now left all alone in the German in the prime in the right direction, but with inudequate appliances. They were not rich enough; that they been only a little wealthier; had they been only a little wealthier; had they possossed move leisure; talent, power—they were just about to touch the talisman; they would have brought to light the philosepher's stone. And as it is part of man's ungodliness with the allore in the German mission in the city, we were at a loss what to do, but with inudequate appliances. They were not rich enough; they were not rich enoug

Should sho, however, prove to be too slow in gathering in this harvest of precions and immortal souls, others no doubt stand ready to thrust in the eickle, garner up the sheafs, and carry oll the palm of victory! O, may we not hecome weary in well doing.

In my next, I intend to say something of the history of German missions in Mobile and Texas.

All the preachers in the district have been faithful to their work; and when I shall have completed this round, I may be able to report from all the cir caits more gracious fruits of their toll.

Before I conclude this notice, I will just say to those interested, that there are several good schools now in success ful operation, and others in prospect in my district; and now is the time to feser and build up home institutions: At Napoleon, in Ilancock county, Miss., there is an excellent school, under the management of Rev. E. D. Pitts, a loal meacher of our Church, than whon a more efficient teacher, amiable, sweetspirited Christian minister and gentleman is not to be found in the country The location of this school is certainly an excellent one, every way desirable for the purposes of an Academy.

At Wostville, in Simpson, another school in very successful operation. Rev M. R. Hollister is at the head of this nstitution, and one of the best proofs of his officioney and acceptability is an vorwholding patronage of the school. If you are in reach of Bro. Hollistor's school, and can get your children in send them on.

Holmesville, in Piko county, is going to redeem herself, too, in the way of far-uishing educational facilities to the intoresting yentle of that county. A line Academy is now being creeted there, and will be ready for students next year I might notice many other things, hut have now extended this communicasion beyond what is usual for me, or may he interesting to others. . Whereas, The Baptist State Cenven-tion has published a velume containing toe, soleoted from the leading religious denominations of the State, our own being one of these; therefore

Resolved, That a committoo be now appointed to examine a copy of the above publication, (therewith laid on the table of the Synod) with a view of ascertaining whether the work he such as that this body may proporly recom-mend it to our Churches, or otherwise

The Rev. J. L. Kirkpatrick, Rov. appointed the aheve committee. Subsequently the committee submit tod the following report which was una-nimonsly adopted by the Synod, viz: The committee appointed to examine the volume of Essays on the Duties of Masters to their Servants, would report, That we have examined the work with much caro, and are of the opinion that it is well adapted to scoure the obpet contemplated in its publication, viz to assist and stimutate masters in the discharge of the responsible and difficult duties they owe to their servants. We. do therefore most cordially recommend to all masters in connection with our Churches, to procure, read and circulate the work, and would suggest to the colperteurs engaged in the distribution of the works of our Board of Publication the propriety of adding the above volume to their stock of books.

A GRAND PLAN.—Such Zion's Her ald (Boston) styles the plan for California, proposed by Dr. Boring and ac goes on to say: .

"This is a grand schemo, and promises to be successful beyond any missionary movement yet attempted by the Southern Church. There is evidently to be made a most dotermined effort on the part of the Sonthorn Church; to occupy as fully as possible the entire missionary ground of the new-State, and onr own Board must see to it that the advantages of our pre-occupancy of it are not lost. We should continually

BISHOP CAPERS .- This aged servant of God on Saturday morning; October 18, reached our city. He is very far from having recovered entirely from his recent dangerous illness, and is literally worn down by an accumulated weight of nlirmity, labor and fatigno. Wo would not awaken the apprehension of friends by being understood that the Bishop is particularly sick, but, at this moment, could his services be spared, he ought to be at home in the bosom of his family, recorniting in rest and retirement, the strength that his work so much requires. By the blessing of a kind Providence, not awaken the apprehension of friends By the blessing of a kind Providence, lie was enabled to attend the Missouri Conference, but, was compelled by the utter impracticability of the thing, to abandon the idea of visiting, as he much desired to do, the Indian Mission Conference. This, to him, is a matter of sincere rogret, but he was compelled by stern circumstances to submit. To travel on horseback from Fayetto, Mo., to Muddy Spring in the Indian Torritory, and that in the very limited period of time that intervened between the sessious, was an undertaking altogether teo serious for the state of his health and strength; and he was dissnaded from the attempt by a formal resolution of the Missonri Conference, unanimously voted. As the only sure means of reaching the Arkansas Conference seen ed to he by the rivor, he returned to St. lonis from the Missouri Conference, reached this place as we have stated, and leaves to-uight for Camden, Ark.

P.S.

I almost onry my brethren there the privileges, labors and honors they in reaping, and will most gladly lend reaping, and will most glady lend helping hand in the noble work. The preachers needed for that work, I am surfo can be obtained; and although the Plorida Conference is not overstocked with men, yet I am anxious that the should be represented in the "Pacific Conference." We have some nobhearled young men, who can do good service there, and who are willing to ga, and I hope the Bisbop will make lection from among thom.

In regard to the money required, I venture to say $1000 can be raised in our little Conference, by its next assion. Brother R. H. Howren has proposed to be one of fifty to give twenty dollars each, to make the money. Let him do what he can. Bro. A Grain has proposed to be oue of one hundred to give ten dollars each for that purpose; and to make the matter easy Bro. Graham proposes, that each present his work thirty dellar which will make the money. Not am sure this can be done; and if so el the preachers can not raise the amontt, others can more than do it.

I have this additional suggestion make. Let every preacher in the leteral control of the control of rila Conference get as many personal they can to give ton or twenty dellar oach to make the money, taking their names and residences, bring up to the next Conference the name and mensy correct list of which to be sent on to the "l'acific Conference," and then each donor can bave his name recorded the book of the Treasuror of the Pecific Conference Missionary Society a life, member. I received ten dollars I have no doubt others on my little circuit will do the same; and I thing Buinbridge Circuit will be good at least for fifty dollars of the money.

I should like to hear from the South western Conferences. What are they doing?—The missionary flame is kind ling afresh in many Conferences, and I have no doubt the Church South will. mako a large increase in her missioned collections this year. "The field is the orld," said the Savior, and many heart since that day has responded to that honevolent sentiment. May the great field soon all be enlivated, and he "salvation of the Lord go forth as a lamp that burneth.".

Significant Movement.

At their late Quarterly Meeting Confolk, Va., unanimously adopted the preamble and resolutions which we give below, oopying from the R. C. Advocate

Our readors are not strangers to the subject the Norfolk Methodists have deemed worthy of their formal action And we doubt not, if their third resold tion be generally acted on by the M. Church, South, a similar expression of opinion would result: "Whereas, The practice prevails is the General and Annual Conferences of our Church of appointing our most es-cient and popular ministers to professor ships in colleges, and to editorships newspapers and periodicals; and belia ing that snob appointments input the nseinlness of such ministers to a pergrent extent; and that by their occupancy of these places their labors are ly to the great interest of the church therefore we, the official members of the Granby Street Station of the Methodis Episcopal Church, South, reflecting un on this subject the views and feelings the entire monibership and con rection with which we are connected, do

Resolve, That we disapprove of the and Annual Conferences of enroburch of appointing the best and most popular ministers to the presidencies and profossorships of colloges, and to the editorship of newspapers and period ioals.

" Resolved, That the practice above stated is, in our opinion, detrimental to the great-interest of the ohurch, and should only be reserved to when mea cannot be found among that perties of the ministry who are not able to do put-toral work, or among this laity of church, who are competent to all the olaces.

" Resolved, That we invite the attent tion of the membership of the Methedist Episoonal Church, South , to a calm and serious consideration of this subject, and respectfully ask from them a expression of opinion relative to it, order, if possible, to it's correction.

Heretofore some escapes have taken place, but against their recurrence in future we are now guarded. We do not, however, rely guarded. We do not, however, rely upon physical means alone, for many of our teachers, especially those of "The Society of Josus," have the happy art of so attaching the pupils—especially the inauginative and impressible—to their persons and the impressive round of services constantly before them, that many of thom become unwilling to leave us, and when compelled by circumstances to do so, they have carried away with them a love for us, and a zeal for our cause, which has been paramount to ovry other attachment or obligation. Several cases of the kind have recently dired. Protestant parents need not have the slightest doubt of our snooss. I will not attempt to repeat the rapturous encounts which Fallallah bestowed on the beouty of the yearing affects and unnatural contequance of an education in opposition to his temperament, apple of her in tertas of incoherent admiration now as an angel, now as a hour; now almost saterializing her into the sultana of a harem, now abuilting her into a spirit. Suffice it to say that a leight which boys call love, and which young sites, with truer taste, "inclination," but with an passionais, all-absorbing love of mind of whiter we read in vomancea, sod which I have no only is sometimes felt by natures of mingled tenerals and fercelty. The beth wound, and the view was sometimes intercapted by a clump of prees. More than once, as the young girl lingered behind one of these, Fad-lalls feared that she had obanged her intention of the belog, and had gone book of turned saide; but, at length; the came to the opposite front of the foundan, and observing a stranger, atopot for a moment in an attitude ale anapses and continuin. Fad-lalls, a presence of mind seemed not to have desarted than in this admiration. He spoke is pologized for his intrasion, praised the garden, and said some thing of the beatty of its mistress. Her. answers were brief and apposite; but she was prolonging his intuition beyond reasonable limits, whon an old gentleman, who had bean approaching unobserved by him in a different direction, made his appearance. I leave you to work up a romance out of this narrativa if, you please. For my part, I shall adhere exactly to truth. The old gentleman was Country, the head of a noble family reduced almost to poverty, and scarcely able to continue inhabiting the leave members of this fathers. The gardelite was tanded by his own inands, and those of his daughter Fenells; and in apite of their aristocratic origin, thoy were both very simpla, nay, humble people, except when one or two harediary prelimites were trangent into play. You seem to think that such characters are not necessarily unformantie; but where, in the harmonious monotony of their existence, can you find the materials of the sublime; what mighty passions can have played around their trangul hearth; what greater sorrows are highly to have occurred to them then the birating of a boille of the Count's good wine, stored up for special occasions; or the deeth of Fenelle's linnet; or the rebellion of the aged domestic, sent raind unr

Admitting, however, that something inight be made of all this, what do you think of pur school-boy, Fadlalish, representing linself as an Eastern-prince on lits travels, and cappressing altogether the fact of his Molammedanism? What do you think of his thin acquiring the confidence of the old acunt under false pretences, as well as the love of his staughter! This came not all to pass in a day, but it came to pass very shortly. Fadlalish pluyab the trustin; remained a fortingfut instead of a day in Pina; spent every day in the society of the Count and bis dangliter; and returned only to restraint and reprimand when every farthing of money ha possessed was exhausted. Of course, he contrived to construct a plausible exouse; and of course, fater a brief period, he started off to Pina again without permission. One or two excapades—ot-hin-kind produced a threat from the apperintendent that he about he seem book to Egypt; upon whileth he oppuly related accorned all authority, and absented himself, entirely from the school. He obtained a little money by selling some lewais and weapons be passessed, and naturally repaired to Pisa, to drink in draughts of love and hope from the eyes of his fair Fenella, whather from a consciantious motive or from a desire to produce a decial val Impression on a nomewhat asperautious mind, he was led to confess to being a Moslem; and publicly shjured bis religion, and adopted that of the daighted Fenella. Soon he inpeally declared himself ber'autor, was accepted, and looked forward to being apoedily naltered aboat his wealth. Ha wrote to his family in Egypt, but received no anawer, all his letters being raterocepted in oor office; and at length, in a fit of rash confidency of the samples and fate, went down to Lepton and again eatseed into communication with the Egyptian eatseed into communication with the Egyptian eatseed into communication

Kosanth's Address .- We have bafnre us the adiress of Kosauth to the people of the United States, which has been in the hands of Major Tochman, at Washington, since February last. Because of the Washington, since February last. Because of the aegotiations peuding with the Türkish government at that time, laving for its object the liberation of Koasuth, it was thought best ant topublish it then. It openials thin address, Koasuth epeaks of the nature of the request made by the Hungarian, through his agency, to the Austrian government. He says it was not the complete independence of his beloved country, aor asy, new rights and privilegas, but simply these three things:

"First, that the inalienabla rights, sanotioned by a thousand years, and by the constitution of my fatherland, should be guarantied by a antional and responsible administration.

a thousand years, and by the constitution of my fatherland, should be guarantied by a antional and responsible administration.

"Second, that every inhabitant of my country, without regard to language of religion, should he free and aqual before the law—all classes having the same privileges and protection of the law.

"Third, that all the people of the Austrian empire, that acknowledge the same parson as emperor, whom we Hungarians recognize as king—and the same haw of succession, should have restored their sacient constitutional rights, of which they had been unjustly despoiled, medified to suit their wasts and the spirit of the age."

The King and Royal family granted these requests, appealing to the sanctity of their oaths us a gaarantee of their fulfilment, and, although, as he says, during three centuries, twolva Kings had aworn logrant similar requests, and to preserve the freedom of the poople of Hungary, and, aftorwerds, by their acts, broke their obligations and parjured themsalvas, still the Hungarians had confidence in these last colemn promises, and were only awakened when the house of Hapsberg disaloaded to the world their intention of reducing them to a more complete subjection, and for this purpose hair already stationed in their land a large body of armed mea ready to set is case the new edicts of the court of Austria should be reaisted.

The Hungarians ever dealred an honorable peace, and were willing to submit to any reasonable terme; they saked the constitutional government were apurned from the feet of the frome, nor would that could be said by or in behalf of them. Their propositions to the Adattlan Government were apurned from the feet of the frome, nor would the isaughty imperial fausity listen to aught that could be said by or in behalf of them.—They threw they embassadors is acreption, and some of them they cowardly murdered, and the King issuad bia manifesto on the 4th of March, 1849, declaring "that Hungary should exis no longe,"

This was the state of their affairs, when the brave m

Incked bravery, but because their enemies ware so numerous.

Kossuth then speaks of the debt of gratitude which the people of Hungary towe to the United States and England. He says the all powerful people of this country, and our liberal government, mapired them with hope, and gave them encopragement by our deep interest in their cause, and our condemnation of the Austrianis. While we irurled another many their condemnation of the Austrianis. While we irurled another with one hand, we welcomed the axiled sons of liberty with the other.

He concludes his andress thus

Herty with the other.

He concludes his address thus:

"May God hiess your country forever! May it heve the glorious destiny to share with other nations the blessing of that liberty which constitutes lie own happiness and fame! May your great example, noble Americans, be to other nations the course of social virtue; your power be the nervo of all tyrains—the productor of the distressed, and your free country ever continue to be the asylum for the oppressed of all nations."

An Interesting Case.—A case is on trial at New York, in which Rodman M. Price suen Mr. Hawes, cashier of the Greenwich Bank, for $100; he have lng given hilas but $200 in changing a $1000 bill, a mistake that Mr. Prica did not discover until he had laft the bank. On his rejurn, the bank refused to correct the inistake. The case has not been de rided, but the court has expressed the following opinion:

"The Court is in doubt if the custom of the sanks nor io correct a sintake, unless discovered before the party leaves the hank, can be sustained; they would expect their sleashers to pay then back any over-payment. But this suir is not against the bank, but against the cashier, who acced also as paying teller, and the question is, if ha had appropriated plaintiff's fruncy to his own use, or in revelving the $1900 ha conducted so negligibly that the plaintiff sastained damage."

Turkish Politics.—Turkey is said to have been recently in the point of a political crisis. It was said that the son of one of the applicants, as successor of Reschild Pacha; had been chosen for the husbend of the Sultan's daughter, a princess of eleven years of age, but the young man, who was said to be full of tallent, was found poismond one morning, and the Sultan's daughter was affianced to Reschild Pecha's son, a child of tan years of age, who, in spite of his extreme youth, he heen appointed Vizier.

"Your Committee regard it as superlluous labe o enlerge upon the anperiority of this Dictionary this is attested by the general circulation while this work has guined in this country, which is believed to be unprecedented for a work so expen

That this work is peculiarly valuable for Com non Schuols is in the opinion of your Committee very evident. There is no branch of knowledg n which it is so important that the 750,000 chil dren of this State who are taught in them should be perfected as in the knowledge of their own lar nage. There is no end so important to the edu cation of the common mind as to use this our com non language with correctness, case and elegonce and to attain which we should make overy possi ble facility readily accessible to all. 'And, in the opinion of your Committee, there is no one book which furnishes so many facilities for this purpose us Webster's Unabridged Dickmary. The hubi of roferring to it will lead every acholar to a knowledge of this mine of wealth, intellectual; and as ne uncovers its treasures, his mind will be enarged by the variety of knowledge which is con densed in the definitions of the familiar words h user. The bahit of reflection too, will be metured by heing employed on objects so entirely within his reach as the words which he spells, and reads, arthuses in speech. If he be once tangut the limbit of reflecting on words, he will soon learn to reflect on the thoughts which these words represent."

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Mr. Editor :- I wish, through the medium of your paper, to eall the attention of our people to the impertance of insuring the lives of our regular itinerant preachere. It is confessed and complained of at this time-throughout the southern portion of the Valley of the Mississippi, that we have net itinerants euough to euphly the wants of our wideextending work. Why is this so? ly 'emtending work. Why is it for want of preachers enough in We have our bounds? By no means. Wo have onough of local preachors, mentally and physically competent to the claims of the work. Why will they not itinerate? Mainly I take it, because they fear their families will not be provided for. I do not mean that they fear their families will not be cared for while they live, and are able to work for the Church-hut in the event of their deathe-they ece no adequate prevision in the financial arrangements of the Church, for the support of their families. The lawyer, the mechanic, the merchant and the farmer, all hope, not only to support their families, but every year to save a little, and sakus, in the process of years. dence for their families in the contingeney of their own deaths. But the itinerant has no euch prespect before him. The etewards make a calculation In the case of plain house-keeping and close economy, without any view to a small annual surplus to meet the neceeeities of age and infirmity, or to support the preachers family, in the event of eath. Now I think thie is one grand reason why so many local minieters will not itinerate, and why se many I preached two years in a circuit in the bor, broken down by many infirmitia The itinerant travels en five, ten, or fifteen years-in the meantime he finds a family growing upen his hands, and upon his heart. By eareful coenomy he manages to live and keep out of debt; but he saves nothing, and he hegine to question him-self. If I fall in the work and leave no meane for my family; how will they live? what will become of them? The answer alarms him, and he locates to engage in some other vocation that holde out better hopes of bread for his family, when he chall no longer be able to pro-oommon result, be presented? A result that oripples the work, by driving men of ripe experience and extensive useful-ness from the field. ness from the field.

My euggestion to the Church is, insure the lives of your preachers. As an average, an annual premium of one hundred and fifty dollars, would insure the lars each, which in the event of their deaths, would ecoure to their families five thousand dollars at least, which at ten per cent, would be an annual income of five hundred dollars, a decent little countries of five hundred dollars, a decent little countries of the line of the little countries of the line of the little countries of the line of the line of the little countries of the line of the little countries of the line of the little countries of eupport for a plain family. Two thirde of our circuite and etations, could without oppression raise thie eurplus hundred and fifty dollare annually for thie purpose. Let out itinerant preachers feel, that not only while they live they will have bread, but that when they die their familiee will be eupported, and if I do not much mistake the spirit that their families will be supported, and if I do not much mistake the spirit that actuates them, they will live and die in the itinerant ranks. How glorious a result would this be: then would the whitened locke of the venorable and the good graco our conference assemblice and by ripeness of wisdom and force of character, effect infinite and everlasting cure it for them. How chall thie, but too good. My dear brother if you viewed this matter in the light that I do, you would blow a huge blast that would wake up some twenty more now and valuable the slumbering interest of the thousande of our Ieracl. Let me entreat you to take the subject under your editorial advortisement?

Now let no good brother become alarmed, and fear that I am teaching either gambling or a distrust of Providonoe. I beach neither, but morely sugpreachere, that the benevolent and wiso have devised, and which has been found nave devised, and which has been found to work most boneflocatly in rescuing hundreds of families from destitution and want. In the mutual life insurance and institutions there can be no gambling, because all are insured, and all must die and the loss fall on many in-

It is celeulated that oulty. But being left just so, four out of forty cows will annually dio, but instead of four poor families loosing twenty dollars each, the loss falle on all and only two dollars is lost by each family. This is the way the plan works.

Time out-San Francisco-San Joie-Cangre-gations-The M. E. Church, South-Late in the Field-Need of Preachers-Prospects,

Bro. Mc Tyeire: —After a journey of 33 days frem New Orleans, and 17 from Panama, at 4 o'clock A. M. of the 30th ultimo, the steamer Pacific quietly gli-ded through the "Golden Gate" and anchored in one of the most capacious and beautiful harbore in the world. All were delighted on awaking to find themselves in full view of the great emporium of the West.

Our little party were soon ashore and comfortably lodged at a hotel. The size, population, and business importance of San Francisco is inconceivable, when its recent origin, and frequent fires are renembered. To see it now, after hearing that it was burned three months since, you cannot realize it. Then to see its opulation, from every part of the world, moving, striving, blustering! I had long thought the people of New Orleans, lived, walked, and worked faster than any others, but was convinced of my mistake soon after landing in California A short walk brought me to the office of Judge S., it was pleasant to look upon his honest, and familiar countenance amid world of strangers.

I learned from him that Dr. Boring was at San Jose, holding Quarterly meeting, not having learned that any reinforcements were on the way, or that even the time had been appointed for any to leave the States. Arrangements were seen made for our services on Sun-day. We have in San Francisco a snug frame building, neatly arranged inside, with a good Sunday school room in the basement. The congregation, merning and evening, were respectable in nnmber and intelligent in appearance, and evidently came to hear what was to be tage, and after a delightful ride of fifty miles, were warmly greeted, and cor-dially welcomed by Bros. Boring and Wynn. It was cheering to mingle with them, and their happy families. Indications being favorable, and hearing of our arrival, they protracted their meet-It continued a week, with goed attendance, congregations attentive and serious. Penitents presented themselves at the altar of prayer, and some feur or five joined the Church on prohation. I can aseure you that such a ecason was interesting and reviving to those of us who had just landed. As missionaries sent eut te aid in planting the Gospel, and at the very outset, to see such cengregatione, such attention, and euch interest manifested | What think you Mr. Editor of euch indicatione? Whatever may be your thoughts, I felt that had our brethren at home known the im-portance of this werk, they would not have left our brethren here so long to struggle alone, fearing that they had not even the sympathics of those who had it in their power to reinferce them. I am compolled to believe that the work here is not understood and appreciated, notwithstanding the faithful representatlens of the Superintendent. I have been here hut a chort time, yet long enough to know that those are much mistaken who suppose that the Southern church is doing, and can do nothing. I think it will be admitted that what is actually proposed to be done very well satisfies these conditions. A principal sum of money is to he raised hy subscriptions sufficient to scoure for each of the beneficiaries an annual interest rovceue of net less than £100, and not more than £200. After their death, an unuity of £50 is to he paid to the unpurried daughter or daughters of each, deriog the time that they remain unmarried, the annuity heing divided among the unmarried daughters of Dr. Newton, if, as is now the case, there should centinue to he two. The whole sum raised, subject to the payments I have mentloned, is to he the property, in equal moleties, of the Old Preachers Fund and of the Wesleyan Missionary Seciety, and is to he placed to their erehis accordingly at the next Conference. At the meeting hold last week in Londoe, subscriptions to a large amount were aunonneed. I believe the list hy this time very considerably exceeds The meeting at which this proposal

His speech was effect. After him a number of able and eloqueot speakers addressed the meeting decidedly the hest and most important speeches, however, heing those of Mr. Edwarh Cordoroy, a gentleman well known among the Methodists of your October 2, 1851. Northeastern States, and Mr. James Huuter, surgeon, of Islington. Who ever wishes to have a correct impression of the character and talents of Jahez Bunting, should read the speeches of these gentlemen, of whom it is only right that I should say that they are well known to he among the most independent, as well as the most intelligent, symen in our hody, men shove all suspicion of being slaves or partizans.

There has been no one in Methodism, since John Wosley, who has been so much misunderstood and misrepresented as Dr. Bunting. But he is begin ning to be bester understood, and pos-terity will do him the justice which many of his contemporaries have refused to render, or have been sadly over-tardy in bestowing.

Dr. Bunting entered the ministry, as I have several times remarked, in the year 1799, and is now seventy-two years of age, ene year older, I believe, than his coeval in laher, Dr. Newton. He had beee for several years the amanuousis and friend of Dr. Percival, the eminent physician of Manchester, who was very surious that he should have presented his medical studies, and entered into partnership with himself, with a view to his becoming his successor. This, how-ever, Dr. Bunting declined, because he felt that he was called to proach the Gespel, and so relinquished the certainty of a large annual income, at once, in profession in which his talents must have enabled him to rise to the greatest eminence. Having entered our work, Jabez Bunting heeame, I helieve in his first year, the assistant of the celebrated William Thompson, at that time the master mind of Mothedism, and possessing a greator share than any of his brethren of that power and influence which, on Mr. Wesloy's death in 1791, eight years before, had been divided among his most distinguished preachers. There can he no doubt that this early training to husiness, especially the husiness of government, and this early introduction to the knowledge of the leading men in Methodism, had much to-do with the extraordinary rapidity of Dr. Bunting's rise in the Connexion. But this grest man was already, at the age of twenty, a finished and powerful preacher. His intimate friend, the late Mr. James Wood, of Manchester, a most intelligent and distinguished man, has often said that Mr. Bunting's seceed sermen was as complete and perfect sermon as any he afterwards preached. Indeed, his early maturity is one of the most remarkable points of his history. Nor was his reputation for modesty and picty less than for ability. All who knew him as a young man, have been ac-

From his child-hood, therefore, he had watched and studied Dr. Bunting, and he had arrived at the cocclusion that the true scoret of his influence was just simply this, that he was a more able man than others."

In the year 1803, Mr. Bunting was stationed in Macclesfield with that eminently pious and in every way excellent which an area. intwistle. The following allusice to Mr. Bunting at this peried is taken from a letter of Mr. Entwistle's, written shortly after the Conference of 1802, and published in his life. Mouridully the autima, wind
With a ghorshy voice is calling—
Beauty, linger not behind;
All to cartle is failing, falling!
Falling! Round me is a breeth
Whispers chillily of death;
In my heart there is a chrob,
In my ear there is a soh;
Listen—yes, a sound of woe—
Death-bed partings, broken, low!
Gloomy vision! she ladyles. Gloomy vision! she is dying-

Tearful question, and replying,
Wasting, wasted—she is clay!
Close the eye, and hring the shroud,
Call the hearso and hid the erowd;
At the board an empty chair,
Round the hearth a gust of care,
In the heart—a winter drear! Oh! ye deep, mysterious springs, Longings—yes rnings undefined, Doiging where the minds undefined, Spik, eithoughts deprived of wings, And prison'd in the darken'd mind, How in the heart's lonely hour Rise we with a shadowy power; Steetres, mightier than earth; Daring—questioning—and dark—Moaning winds they stringle forth, Hark!

Soleinn! solemn! sight forbid, Soleinn! soleinn! sight forma,
Front the earthly senses hid,
Mystic things are round as sill!;
And we feet them with a thrill.
'Mid the crip and yellow leaves,
Hear, e'en now, a split-treal—
Rusding—hark! and overhead
An mearthly sadness grieves;
Low repinings, sighs of things
Doom'd to wintry wanderings!

Doom'd to wintry wanderings:
How is this! a rosy child
Boundeth there with laughter wild;
While contented purents, after,
Smile to hear its inputy laughter!
Death bed wallings are not there,
Nor spirit warnings in the air;
Winds are healthful, earth is fair.
Now a seraph-whisper stealeth,
Oli, what music in the strain!
Peace to discontent appendent; Peace to discontent appealeth;
Melt, my heart, it comes again!

Mell, my heart, it comes again!

"Now the hrawny trees and bere," Wreatle with the bracing alt;
Now the winged wand'rers pass,
But no notes of sorrow fall;
Now the ericket quits the grass,
But for hearth of social hall;
Now the ericket quits the grass,
But for hearth of social hall;
Muser! thou who heartest alone
Dirges of hide's summer gone;
Thou who surriest at the sound
Of merry voices, hook around:
There are smiling eyes before thee,
Happy skies are smiling o'er thee;
Nature though in russet dreat,
But prepares a hrighter vest;
But thy demon guest depart,
At his whispers chill and drear,
Wither'd leaves bestrew thy heart—
Autumn's there!"

Oe the lat of Augast the National Guard of Colonia had ventured to manifest their satisfaction at the departure of the troops of the garrison, commanded by Liest. Gen. Moreno. At the same time, they took little palae to coaceal the fael that the estrance of Geaerals Urquiza and Garson telo the Oriectal territory was eot displeasing to them. Ohserving these symptoms of the teadency of public opicion, the police ageala of Oribe hesteed to inform Moreao, who was thea encamped six leagues from Golocia. As acce as this officer had examined the reports of his spies, he retureed with all speed to Colouia, bringing with him about 400 mea and 200 horses, entered the towe, and gave the signed for a general massora; mea, "suspected" childree, fell under the knives of the outbroats. Moreeo, to excite by his example the fury of these assassins, with his own hands cut the throat of a young maa named Napoleon Neves. Fearful incidents marked the progress of their scae of earaege. These crecutioners, infuriated against their victims, were seen to mutilate them, to rob the corpass of their jewelry and earrlegs, and, not satisfied with cutting off their flegers and nomes, to cut up their skins into strips to make ropes for their eart harness. Electric Engine. Professor Page, of Washing Electric Engrae.—Professor Page, of Washington, in about in exhibit his electric augue in New York. The Tribune says:

This engine, though with an imadequate buttery, generates and excit in a force of over six liorse power, which costs, under the present imperfect adaptations, about wenty cents per, bour, or $2 for a day of ten hours. There is no doubt, however, that the cost will be reduced, and the efficiency of the machine declidedly ingreased. The immense power up the magnet, as developed by Professor Page's a paratus, exceeds off preconception. A smalf-crowbar touched to or held tear a smooth true piston, around which along auguette wire has been curied; is attracted with termenibus force on the application of our wire reoutering the coll with a britery, so that it can not be wienched a way by an ordinary names has exercises. NOT VERY FAR. Surely you heaves, where angels sea God's face, Is not so distant as we deem
From this low earth! Tis but a little space, The narrow crossies of a aleeder stream : Tie bat a veil, which wieda might blow aside; Yes, these are all that as of earth divide From the bright dwelling of the glorified-

These peaks are never beaven than earth below;
These hills are higher than they seem;
T is not the colouds they tooch, nor the coft brow Of the o'erbanding exare as we deem;
'Tis the blue floor of heaven that they appear; And, like some old and wildly-rugged stair,

The land of which I dream. These ocean wavas, in their nomeasured aweep, Are brighter, hluer than they seem; Are brighter, nuce toan they seem;
True images of the celectiel deep—
Fed from the fullness of the unfailing stream—
Heaven's glassy sea of overlasting reat,
With not a breath to atir its silent broast,

THE FUTURE. Could I behold the future years, That Heaven designs for me-The blasted hopes—the trembling feare— The weary nights—the woes and tears— How wretched must 1 be?

The friends who love me and coress, ind meet me with a smile-More than my feeble words express— May then have hearts of guile.

The hill of Fame that looks so bright-So dazzliog to my view— Where Poesy in rohes of light Beams glorious on its sonny hoight, I may in vain parene.

The world, perhaps, mey treet with acorn,
Tora from its love away,
The unasuming, humble born, Till every hope oe earth is goee,
And springe of life decay.

Or it may be an early tomb, This fading form shall find : Or sould I know, when death shell some, when the beaven would be my endless home.

Ie my boyhood a mirning calm, and my boyish bosom solated
All its work with fregrent balm.
Fan ms gently, souther o applying,

Fan ms gently, souther o sephyrs,
For my eyes are strangely dim,
And I hardly bear the echo
Of my youth coefetted hymn.
For my dreary course is distant:
From the henvens leved of old,
And around me now are beating
Stormy seas and billows cold.

Fan me gently, southerts tenhyrs,
For my heart is sail and lone;
Bear me mem'rien from the inleis.
That my jeyeus youth has known;
Where my tireless foot fath lingered,
Where the early flewar I we called;
Oh! the wild, dark sea is felling.
And again my care is felling.

Fan me gently, southern asphyre!
Now the drains of borhood start
And their awast, and ling visions,
Heves o'et my yearning heart.
Now once more, in all their beauty,
Sunny days and hours steal on. And the acrow of my wandering.
With their melody bath flown.

Reduce the Price of the Books.

Mr. Editor-I am glad to see, in the action of the St. Louis Conference in regard to reducing the price of eur I have long entertained the opinion that our policy on this subject bas been wrong and injurious to the deeign we have in the circulation of Moth odist literature.

I bave been accustomed to sell and circulate our books for twonty years and have not sold less than five thou sand dollars' worth in that time, although I bave occupied, for the most part, sparsely populated regions of country, and the complaint has been common and the complaint has been common every where, that our books were too.

Ae to the revenue arising to the Church from this source, I am satisfied that it would be better supplied by the voluntary contributions of the people In fact it is a plain case. If the price of books was reduced, the peeple would he able to give much more for the obthe Book Cencern.

Take a case. A preacher on bis cireuit, in ene year, sells feur bundred dol lars' worth of books; the peeplo pay as profit on those books, say twonty-five per cent, making one hundred dollars the Cenferenc's collection on those cir cuits will not average more than twentyfivo dollars. Hore, then, you have ene hundred and twenty-five dollars profit all told, for the objects contemplated Now reduce the price of books, say only twenty-five per cent, and that circuit will be able to give just as much money as you new receive from it. In add tion to this, a great many more books families would be supplied with good books that are now well nigh destitute. Suppose Clarke's Commentary were sold for Wn or twelve dollars; I could sell ten cepies where I new sell two; and if Weslsy's Sermens were seld for twe dollars instead of three, I could sell ten sets te eno at present prices. Se ple want our hymn beoks, but many of them cannot pay fer ene fer each of the family. Reduce the price, and we can sall at least three times as many as

I would say let the price be reduced so as to allow the preachers twenty five per cent for sslling, and cover the expenses of publication, and I am sure we shall see a very great change in this matter. We shall see our people well supplied with our books, we shall see supplied with eur beoks, we them much more jutelligent and much mere benevolent, and this is what wo all desiro. Thousands of publicatious are making their way inte Methedist families from other publishing houses, because of the price; some of these are good hooks, others are uet so good; hut all this trade would flew to the Methedist Beek Cencern if the price of cur books was reduced

I hope this subject will commend it self to the minds of our people every where, and that the preachers and the Annual Conferences will not fail to give us their opinion. Let the question he agitated, and I think a reformation may be brought about that will tell for good upon the Church and the whole countries.

apon the Churon and try. Yours, respectfully, P. P. Smith. Thomasville, Ga., Oct. 30, 1851.

The Church Thermometer.

Well, what is that? Ask any veterar aster who has weathered the storms and rsjoiced in the sunshines of a long ministerial life, and he will tell you that it is the secial prayer meeting. The true thermometer of a church, te iudieate its epiritual temperature, is the weekly gathering around the merey seat. A cold church. It is at ence the cause and the effect of epiritual decleusion.

If the place of prayer is well nigh lecerted; if the few who are present in bedy seem absent in spirit; if the pray ers offered are languid, fermal, mean ngless, without peint and without une tien, then the paster has abundant givee a very encouraging account of the cause for beart heavinese and teare. progress of Protestantism in the West Ssrmene preached to each a people are of Ireland. Paris Correspondence.

of Popish controversy against the Protestants, and have been so much aston shed at its statements, that I cannot refrain from sending you a sample of them, fo' show how we are treated in countries where the Papists are in a majority and in power. The book is entitled, "A Protestant Catechism for the use of men of good faith," and is invosted with the approhation of the late litical newspapers, whose opinions a Bisbop of Troyes. It contains 380 pages, is well printed, beautifully bound, and belongs to a series of reward books, issued two years ago, for Popish saminaries and schools. It purports to give a faithful account of the Pretestants, and " te answer all the calumnies which are continually to be found in the knap eack er in the mouth of the Methodist ministers and colporteurs." It prooeeds by a series of questions, each of which is the heading of a chapter. Here are some of them :

"Wliat is to be thought of a religion which has begun by debauchery? which has been spread and established hy viotained by vielence? which is forced te employ lying and calumny? which al-lews one to believe any thing as being the deetrine of the Gospel? which allows one to do any thing as heing the true meral of the Gespel? which in practice is necessarily in contradiction with its dectrines?

In answering these questions, the author is se very ignerant, that he repro-sents the Rationalists of Germany, the Calvinists of Geneva, and the Methodists of England as heing the same, since they are l'retestants. It is therefore very easy for him to show that a Pretestant (that is a man who is at the same time a rationalist, a Calvinist and a Methodist!) helieves centradictory dectrines, and is in his theory a feel.
What do you think of such statements

as the fellowing ? " Wesley, the founder of one of these societies of new Pretestant Saints, proclaimed the following fundamental principle: 'Jesus Christ is come to abelish the moral law, and a part of Christian liherty cousists in transgressing the commandments of God. Page 307. "Q. Who are the Saints of Protestantism? A. The Methodists, whe pre-tend to he mere deveut than the com-mon Calvinists, from whom they have ssparated, in order to attain better Calwemen hear an supertant figure in the ever, either in a direct or indirect mu chapels and meetings, where they preach and prephecy. Q. But does not Saint Paul ferhid wemen to speak in the as-semblies of the faithful? A. What a simpleton you must ho. De you think that a Pretestant, especially a female one, cannot get rid of St. Paul, when she is inspired by the Hely Ghost? p.

"The Catholic missionary bids a farewell adicu to his country, ready to sacrifice his life, and taking with him only his breviary, a few books, a crucifix and his little chapel, he goes where the salvation of souls calls him; he lives under the savage's but; he glides along among the spies of China; he faces death in the dungeons of Tonquin and Tartary. But do not look for the Protestant missionary in such places. Boing a broker of skins, hair eil, indige and eld iron, more than of Bibles, he requires stations which are mest com-modious fer tradiug, a population which he can easily intimidate, shoree that English. Shew him such a place, and you will see him land, with his weman and bis young onss, intrenched behind bales of cotton-p. 160. The Cathelic missionary only seeks the kingdom el God and the winning of souls; he fears neither bungsr ner prison nor peverty nor death. The Protestant missionary seks first of all gain; he becomes skin merchant, an iron hreker, a hrandy ssller, a sliesp master, or the agent e seme large Lenden commercial house te these gaine he adde the large fixed salary which he receivee frem the Bible seciety. And when he has thus made his fortune, he returns to England, endows hie daughters, marries his sons, and enjoys the sweet leisure which the Gespel has procured for him-p. 260. The principal thing which Pretestant missionaries teach te this poor eavages

s drunkenness-p. 315. "The Catbolic priest gives to the poor he euperfluity of bie small salary, he ondews churches, hespitals and charity chocle. But bew do the Pretestant slergy spend the superfluity of their neome? In huying dresses for Mrs. the Minietress, and ernamente for Mise -p. 262. The Catholic priest ie found vherever there are unfertunates te suceor. We see him dying at Milan and Marseilles, amongst the pestiferous; at Psris and elsewhere amengst the chelera patients. But let the plague or tho holsra ceme, the Pretostant minister flies; bo hidos bimself in his heuso; he must live fer hie female and his young oues."—p. 264.

Talking of the St. Barthelemy's massacre, the author says:

" If the fanatieism of Cathelies has wonder to find their risen Savieur there made any victims, that of the Pretostoo, with His benedictions. These who seldom prayed, are now ready to pour the kingdom of France, and covored it with ruins. The Catholies did not attack, they were attacked; they defend-reading of the Bible? No; this prebl

Latiu, the Greek or the Hebrew guages."-p. 213.

How consoling this must be for mortals as happen to know enly the nother tonguo!

I might give many mere quote of the same kind, but enough has be of the same kind, with what truth wa us characterized in this beantiful volum One last extract will very aptly followed the preceding:

Thus, one of our French bishops he within the last fortnight, forbidden the reading of the Presse, edited by Em writers. Perhaps the cause of this pr hibition is, that some time before the Presse contained an article which clared that, notwithstanding the land the device of equality sad liber; the French government was partial the Catholic religion, since it allower the free circulation of such infamou volumes as the Protestant Catechian (of which it gave some extracts) while it condemned to a fiae and to prison to Protestant beoksellers for selling Rousel's tracts againet Popery.

This is a proof that Pepery is raising its bead and showing more intolerant than over, new that the Jesuits are muthan over, new that the government has give up many points te them. __ er at N ANSWER TO MY LIFE IS LIKE TH SEMMER ROSE ... By Mas. BUCKLEY. NSWER T(1 "MY LIFE IS BURKLEY, SEMMER ROSE". BY MRS. BURKLEY,
The dews of night may fall from Heaven,
Upon the wither'd ruse's beal,
And terrs of find regret be given,
To morro the virtues of the dead;
Yet morroug's son the dew will dry,
And tears will take from Sorrow's oye
Affection's pangs be luther if sleep,
And even Love forget to seep.

The tree may mourouts fathan least,
And anoman would bewall its bloom,
And triends may beave the sigh of greef;
O'er those who sleep within the tombYet soon will spring andw the flowers,
And time will bung more smiling hours;
in Franciship's heart'all grief will die,
And vern Love forget to sigh.

And even Love larget to sign.

The sea may on the desert shore
Lament each trace it bears away;
The lovely hart its grafs may port
The the right A translating fast deary;
Yet when all trees is but and gone,
The waves dance bright and gally on;
The soun Affection's bunds are torn,
And even Love forgets to mourn.

Written in unswer to those of Mrs. Buckley in reply to Mr. Wilde's My Life is Like the Summer Rose." By W. CMITH.

The draw ut night may full from Huavenlpon the water drase's bed.

And many n becauseme bud be givan, luther of that which may is dead.

In hear'st that which may be dead.
The morning sun in haleyon hours,
May share upon this heat of flowers;
But they whose grief is pure and deep.
Can surely he'ver cease to weep.
The teaffers tree, whun spring shall come,
May teel its warm, reviving power;
And not borth many a lovely bloom,
When moisten'd by its genial shower:
But sun nor shower can e'ver restora.
The briefinds whom now wasee no more;
'And birds may sing, and zephyrs blow;
These tears can never coase to flow.

The open wave may gaily swell, Reseating from the surm-hash'd shore, But Memory heers the funeral knell, Amid Its lond-resonating roar. Though Natura still her course may keep, Nor know o'er all our ills to weep; Beyoret hearts, when rudely forn, Can never cease on earth to mourn.

DIED-On 17th October, in this port, Captair off years table his disease, typhold fever. Captain to had been a member of the Congregational Charles for six years past, and was a devout, exceptable Christian. This wife, who fortunately made the last vayage with him, was at his side in sickness. His mind wandered much; but, before death, the clouds cleored away and land was in

The Scriptures were read, a hymn sung by the crew, and prayer tande, out as the ship sailed along praise nt up to beaven. Would to Gal that there were many on the earth like b m. . A FRIEND.

DIED-la Mahile, October 31, BENJAMIN B. gaged to mercontile business until the autumn of 1831, when he removed to this chy, where he has request of friends and the appeals of the needy. He seemed almost incapable of saying no, and this quality which, properly gnarded, is codesirable in the sizen and friend, and so indispensable in the native timidity he never took a prominent part in public religious exercises, his life illustrated in spirit and principles. Few men were over more attached to the Church of his choice then hes and few men ever responded more readily and liberally to its rells, whether fur the support of public worship in his awn neighburhood, or to carry the Gospel to the dark and benighted. The open-handed generosity which made him accessible to all appeids of the needy, brought under the influence o Christmuity, made bim determine that none should excel him to their offerings to the Lord. How, seldom do we meet with emulation of this kind!

Brother Fontain was equally axemplary and amiable in his domestic, as in his business and so-cial relations. He was a most kind and conside-rate husband, a fond and ladulgent father.

But the fund father, the klud husband, the estimable vitizen, and the exemplary and valued mem-ber of the Church is gone. His disease was of such a nature as nut to admit of his conversing much, or even lixing his mind upon any subject steadily, for some time before his dealif; yet his well-onlered life-his advancing maturity of Christian character, perceptible to those most intimate with him-coupled with the fact that the last word he uttered distinctly, was an emphatic "yas," to the question " is Christ precious to you? " furnish us ground to helieve that he has gone to a better world. Br. F. had filled various offices in the Church, from which he will be missed. Good Advice to Americans.—The Journal des Debats, of October 1st, as wa learn from Mr. Walah's correspondence, contains a copious review, signed by Prof. Michel Chevalier, of tha thirtesall, French edition of M. de Toequeville's Democracy in America. He ascribes the growth and prosperity of the United States to moral causes—to whee institutions and religious impressions. He observes: "As long as the Americans preserve their religious spirit and social ethics, they will keep their Democratic Republia. When thay lose them, the would will see a corrupt aristocracy of wealth amil debased masses." All histary, all usperience, all analogy, prova the irresistible truth of thes. It is not institutions alone that keep uperple frea. In the tatelligence, religious spirit and social morality of the peopla themselves lies all hope of their continuance under a free, righteous and equal form of government. [Boston Trans.]

The stationed preachers. will be absent from the city from the 25th December to 10th January. It wenld not only be gratifying to them, hut contribute much to the accommodation of the missionaries and their familles, if the embarkation should not be fixed within that time.

BOOKS AND STATIONERY .- Mr. Ball. 56 Gravier, has just returned from abroad, with a very fine and full " stock ' of his literary goods, ranging from horn books to Encyclopedias. We are pleased at snch unmistakable evidences of his well deserved patronage and prosperity.

CALIFORNIA CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The first and specimen number, dated October 10, came to hand by the last mail. It is an organ of the M. Episcopal Church, North, in California, pnblished at Ban Francisco, at $6 per annum. In size not larger that our own sheet. Its typographical execution is excellent, and we with pleasure add it to the list of exchanges.

ARKANSAS CONFERENCE.—Rev. W. L. McAlister writes from Camden, on 5th

"Our Conference organized to-day, in this place. Bp. Capers presides, in feeble health. Our preachers generally are present, looking well. Two have fallen since we last met-Bros. Easterbrook and Mason."

We expected, up to the hour of going to press, further intelligence from the Conference, but none has arrived.

Virginia Conference.

This body adjourned its session in Alexandria on the 6th inst. Bp. Andraw, detained by domestic affliction, did not reach the Conference tills its third day of session. His appearance, we regret to learn; indicated exhaustion and feebleness.

Conference Collections .- The editor of the R. C. Advocate, from which we ence calls for." ur information, says:

"It will be gratifying to the Church in Virginia to know that in our Conference collections we have surpassed all our former snocesses. Last year we de-clared a dividend to the claimants upon our Conference funds, of seventy-six and one third cents on the dollar. This year it reached eighty-seven and a half cents. A fact as creditable to our financial system as it will be gratifying to those whose necessities compel them to rely upon these funds for a principal part of their snpport. We regard this as a sufficient proof of the efficiency of our fiscal system, and an augury of still greater success for the time to come. If each minister will this year earry out the provisions of the plan, we doubt not hut the Board of Stewards, at our next Conference, will pay the full amount of all claims on the score of salary; and continuing it, in a few years will pay a considerable item beyond it for family expenses. We hope all concerned will give full scope to the requirements of the system, and by perseverance bring all the people to regard it as a matter too important to be overlooked or neg-

The fact is a serrowful one. had anticipated a very different result, and we hope it is the last time such a report shall go ont from the Virginia Conference."

Education. The educational interests of the Conference will be found to be in a fourishing condition. The report from Randolph Macon College will fill the heart of the Church with joy. The Conference also gave its sanction, with great magninic. with great unanimity, to a movement in favor of the establishment of a Female College at Murfreesboro'.

Churches in Alexandria and Washing to our readers in Virginia, and to those who so nobly assisted in the Southern Conferences, that by the indefaulgable labors of the Rev. L. Rosser, a shurch edifice has been erected in Alexandria worthy of the fame of Southern Methodism for taste and liberality. It is the church of the place, and an orna-ment of it; eligibly located, and graceful in style and proportions, it will stand as a light and handmark of Methodism on the shores of the Potomac. Southern Methodism Sourishee here, as elsewhere on the border. In this connection we may also remark that the Church in Washington City is in a condition of prosperity, and promises great usefulness. It is progressively aug-menting in numbers and influence, and ts permauence is a fixed fact

Reception of Conference. Never wa the Virginia Conference received with more cordiality, or treated with greater kindness by any community. True Northern Mcthodism gave us the cold shoulder. But the oitizens arranged things after a fashion of their own that nabled us to do very well without them. The Baptist, Preshyterian and Methorously tendered to the Conference, and their pulpits were regularly supplied.

Dr. Deggett, although editor of the Quarterly Review, has been reappointed to Centenary charge. Next Conference to be held at Fredericksburg.

Tennessee Conference.

From the N. and L. Ch. Advocate we have information concerning this Conference, which met at Lebanon, Tennessee, 29th ult., Bishop Paine pre-

Rev. E. H. Hatcher was too unwell to preach, according to appointment, the Conference sermon. He was ex cused, and a copy requested for publication.

On the first day of the session. note or bond for $500, executed by Bro J. C. Malone, of Athens, Ala., was presented to the bishop through the Rev James W. Allen. The object of the donor is to lay the foundation of a permanent missionary fund, the interest or proceeds of which shall be applied annually to the support of missions under the supervision of the Methodist Episecpal Church, South: This gave oceasion to rraise a committee for the purpose of devising a plan for the formation of an association, and of inquiring into the propriety of securing chartered privieges for such association.

On the second day, Dr. Wadsworth presented the report of the Board of Trustees of Lagrange College, which was read and referred to the Committee on Edneation. The report gives a very encouraging account of the condition and prespects of the college. The nnm-ber of students ie larger than usual, and there has been a gracious revival of religion during the year, in which many of the young men connected with the institution were greatly blessed.

Two members of Conference had died during the year-Revs. A. G. Kelly and G. W. Sneed. They died well.

The Committee on Examination of those on trial made a report in the main favorable. "There were," says Doctor McFerrin, "a few exceptions in the class, but hope was entertained that those who were deficient would give in future more attention to reading and

We are much gratified to note the following editorial paragraph:

"There was also a large number of candidates for admission on trial in the traveling connection-mere indeed than the demand in the Tennessee Cenfer-

Drs. Sehon and Stevenson were sent, ably representing their respective Chnreh interests.

The Conference enjoyed a short and harmonious session, and adjourned on the 4th inst. J. S. Malone was appointed missionary to California. G W. Lentz and A: Hinkle transferred to East Texas Conference. S. S. Moody without appointment. Next Conference to be held in Pulaski, Tenn.

THE PREADLERS-WHERE ARE THEY? The last issue of the S. C. Advocato contains a lengthened editorial on the policy of the Church in officering her iterary institutions with itinerant preachers. Our contemporary puts forth views antagonistic to those advocated by us. A venerable Bishop has well remarked of this policy, that it has been sadly overdone. Even Dr. Pierce whose lead our good brother of Charleston followe, admits: "I think this policy has been earried quite too far. The m inisterial obligation is first, exclusive, paramount." So we persist in believing and in calling the attention of the Church to this thing.

The declamations of our good brother on the general subject of education, religious education, are all well enough and eloquent. We di) not differ from him there. Who does ? The arguments he offers on the only real point at issue eall for no reply at this late day of the discussion, having already appeared in the other Church papers, and especially in an able article, on the same side, hy Prof. Deems, in the S. M. Pulpit.

METHODIST CHURCH SUIT.

M. Geneurt Count, Noth 11, 1851 ... Bafore Jodes Nation and Botts ... Henry S. Basoom and athers vi Genres Lane and others: Judgo Nelson delivered the fellowing Importen and able decision in this cose, which, it will be re-nembered, was argued. In May last by eminent mounted for the North and the South. The Hen usel for the South, and the Hou. Rufus Chos.

The Northern Church, however could No spolegy is needed for the length of what ion not relax itself sufficiently to exhibit lows. This well considered opinion will be read not relax itself sufficiently to exhibit with profound interest, and received as a pleasing with profound interest, and received as a pleasing lemonstration of the high-toned impartiality of our demonstration of the high-toned impartiality of our Federel Courts:

We have thus stated what we regard the material parts of the bill and answer. A good deal of documentary proof was read on the hearing; but, upou the view we have taken of the case, it will not be necessery to refer particularly to it, except as stated in the ecume of this opinion, as most, if not all, of the facts meterial to be noticed ere not matters of serious dispute. Indeed, the bill and enswer present most of the facts upon which our spinion will be founded.

The complainants include traveling, supermnumerary, and superannuated preschers, belonging, to the traveling connection of preachers in the Methodist Episeopal Church, South, representing in this suit a numerous body in that connection; and claim—their propurtionate shere in the profits of the Book Concern, which this description of persons were confessedly entitled to before the division of the Methodist Episeopal Church into two distinct organizations took place, under the plan of separation of 1844. This Book Concern was established et a very early day, by the traveling—prescolors—laconnection with that church, and the profits to be derived thereform devoted by them to the relief of their distressed, supernumerary, and worn out brothers, their widows and orphens. The establishment was smell, at first, but, at present, is one of a very large capital and of extensive operations, inoducing great-profits, to be applied in behalf of the objects of the ciarity. It has, doubtless, bear and ducted with great judgmont and prodence, by the nyents in the immediate charge of it; but its growth end present megalitude are not less owing to the labors and devotion of the body of traveling preachers, who have always taken the prificipal charge of the circulation and eale of the books in the accounting to too proper authorities for the pro-ceeds.

The traveling preachers of this church were the founders of the charity, and 'liave designated the objects and purposee for which it shell be applied; and, if it is, at any time, wrongfully withheld his those in the immediate cherge of it, or diverted from the objects designed by the founder, it is the city of the Court to interfere and enforce the exe-cution of the trust.

The foundation of this cherity is peculiar end-nevel, differing essentially from the cases of this which the endowment was made, also entitled to its proceeds.

We do not perceive, however, that these considerations cen in eny wey affect the nature or charaoter of the interest of the compleinants, or confers upon them a title to the enjoyment of their proportion of the proceeds, superior to that of beneficiaries of a pure charity, where a third person has made the endowment in the ordinary way for charitable and pious uses, or, that it cen be administered upon any other principles that those governing courts of equity in this class of cases. For, eccording to the original constitution of this fund by the founders, who had a right to prescribe the terms and conditions upon which the proceeds or profits should be distributed, and the persons to whom, and which, when prescribed, furnishes the

The bill brings the complainants clearly within the description of persons enlitted to a distribution of the proceeds of the fund; and the main question in the case, therefore; arises upon the answer and proofs in support of it.

It is insisted,

1. That the resolutions of the General Conference of 1844, when properly understood do not

2. That, if otherwise, the General Conference was not possessed of connetent power and authority to assent to or authorize tha division. And,

3. That the division, therefore, that took place, was a nullity; and the separate organization a wrongful withdrawal and disconnection from the membership, communion and government of the churoli, by reason of which the traveling, supernumerary and word-out preceders composing the separate organizations are taken out of the description of the beneficiaries of the fund.

There were some other matters brought into view in the course of the argument, which we may notice hereafter; but, the above positions present the main grounds upon which the defence rests.

1. As to the resolutions, or plan of separation, as they are usually called.

The first one declares, that, should the annual Conferences of the slaveholding States find it nocessary to onlite in a distinct consection. All the societies, stations and conferences adhering to the church in the South by a vote of the mejority of the membern, shall remain under the unmolested pastoral care of the South by a vote of the mejority of the membern, shall remain under the unmolested pastoral care of the South by a vote of the mejority of the membern, shall remain under the unmolested pastoral care of the South, and the property of the other; and, also, from exercising any pastoral oversight therein.

The second, that ministers, local and traveling, of every grada and office in the Methodist Episcopal Church, in meet-only the Methodist Episcopal Church, in meet-only of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in m pail Church, may, as they preter, remain-in that of urch, or without blame attach themselves to the Church South.

The ninth resolution declares, that all the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in meeting houses, personages, colleges, schools, confarence funds, cemeterias, and el every kind, within the limits of the Southern organization, chull be free from any olsim set up on the part of the Methodist Episcopal Church, so far as thie resolution can be of force in the premises.

The third is a recommendation to the Annual Confarences, at their approaching sessions, lo authorize a change of the restrictive erticle of the fundamental law of the ohurch, which wa shall have occasion to azamine with some particularity la another branch of this case, and which prohibited the General Conference from appropriating the produce of the Book Concern to any other purpose than for the benefit of the traveling, supernumorary, and worn-out preachers, their widows and orphans, without the concurrence of the Anaual Conferences.

The change recommended was to add to the clause of limitation, "and to such other purposes as may be determined upon by a vote of two-thirds of the mambers of the General Conference."

The object of recommending this change, was to work the Carear Conference to proceed the proposes.

as may be determined upon by a vote of two-thirds of the mambers of the General Conference."

The object of recommending this change, was to analic the General Conforence to proceed at onca, and make an equitable division of the property and effects belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, as then organized, between the two separate organizations, which had been authorized in the preceding resolutions. For this purpose, the next resolution provided that as soon as the Annual Conferences shall have concurred in the recommendation, the agent at New York and Cinoinnati ware directed to delivar over to tha agent of the Church, South, all notes, etc., against the ministers, members, or citizens within its boundaries, for the sole use of aid church; and, also, to convey to such agent ail the real estata and other property connected with the printing establishments at Charleston, Richinoud, and Nashvelle, which then belonged to the church; and in the ons following, that there should be transferred to the said sgeat so much of the capital and, produce of the Methodist Book Concern as would, with the property and effects hefore meationed, bear the saince proportion to the whole property of the said concern that the traveling prenchers in the Southern Church hors to all the travaling pracchers of the Methodist Episcopal Charch.

The terms and mode of payment were then prescribed, and commissioners to be appointed by the Southern organization, to estimate and are the amount that might fall due them seconding to the praceding arrange.

ment. And, he winding up, the hishops ore requested to lay that part of the report (resolutions) requiring the cotten of the Annual Cenferences, helore them as soon es possible.

Now, it will be seen from this analysis of the plen of seporation, that the only condition or contingency upon which an absolute division of the church organization was made to depend, was the action of the acvoral Annual Conferences in the slaveholding States. If these should find it necessary to tunite in favor of e. distinct organization, by the very terms of the plan, the separation was to take place according to the houndary designated. It was left to them to judge of the pecessiv; and their judgment is made final in the matter. And when the decicion is mode, and the church divided into two separate hodies, it is declared thet ministers of every grade and office in the Methodist Epiccopal Church, may, as they prefer, remain in that church, or, without hleme, ettoch themselves to the Church South.

The whole plen of saparation confirms this view. As soon es the separation lakes place in accordence with the first resolution.

but also upon the assent of all the annual Conferences to change the restrictive erticle. And the preamble to the plan of saparation was referred to, as countainaoing this construction. We thiak otherwise. On the contrary, in our judgment, it confirms the view above taken.

That preamble recites that a declaration hed been presented to the General Conference; with the signatures of fifty-one delegates of that body from phirteen annual Conferences in the slaveholding States, representing that for various reasone enumerated, the objects end purposes of the Christian ministers and church organization cannot he successfully accomplished by them, under the jurisdiction of the General Conference, as then constituted; and thet, in the avent of a separation, as not improbable, we esteem it the duty of the General Conference to meet the emergancy with Christian kindness and the stricest equity. Thearfollows the plan of separation. And it leaves heretofore compact body of Christians in pieces. The agifation growing out of it had reached the lighest authorities of the Church, and had brought in conflict its chiaf functionaries, end ablest members, and in respect to which opinione were entertained and expressed, deep and irreconcileable. In the judgement of a large portion of the body separation was the only alternetive to preserve the future Christian fellowahip end usefuiness of the church. The division of the property was but a consequence of exparation, aubordinate, and of comparative insignificances.

Instead of the decision of the church depending upon the division of the common property, the very reversa is life result of the true construction of the plan of separation.

IL—As to the power of the General Conference to authorize a separation of the clurch organization.

The Methodict Episcopal Church of the United States was established, in its government, doctrine and discipline, by a General Conference of the traveling preachers in this communion in 1784. Down to that time the Methodist societies in America had been governed by John Weeley, the founder of this demonstration of Christians, through the egency of his assistents. During this year, the entire government was taken into the lands of the traveling preachers with his approhation and assent. They organized it, established its doctrines and discipline, appointed the ceveral authorities—superintendents, or histops, ministers, and preachers—to administrat its polity, and promulgate its doctrines and discipline, appointed the several authorities—superintendents, or histops, ministers, and preachers—to administrate polity, and promulgate its doctrines and discipline, appointed the several authorities—superintendents, or histops, ministers, and preachers—to administrate polity, and promulgate its doctrines and discipline, appointed the source and fountain of all its temporal power are the traveling preachers in this connection with its governmental organization, and never leed. The traveling pre too long a period, of the Christian ordinances and religious-instruction.

The General Conference of 1808, which determined in favor of a delegated body for the future, imposed upon the powars of this body certain limitations, which, in the languaga of the proceedings of the church, are called restrictive articles, six in number. It is deciared, that the General Conference shall have full powers to make rules and regulations for the church, under the following limitations and rastrictions:

1. They shall not alter or change the articles of religion, nor estal lish any new standards of decirine.

2. They shall not allow of more than one representative for every fourteen members of the Annual Confarence, nor less than one for every thirty.

Ather contactness, nor less than one for every thirty.

3. They shall not alter the government so as to do nwey with episcopologa, or destroy the plan of idinerant superintendencies.

4. They shall not change the general rules of the united societies.

5. They shall not deprive the ministers or preach-

5. They shall not deprive the ministers or prason-ers of trial by committee, and of an appeal; nor the members of trial before the acciety or lay com-mittee, and appeal.

6. They shall not appropriate the produce of the Book Concern, nor of the Chartar Fund, to any purpose other than for the benefit of the travaling,

Annual Conference prosent, and voting, a majority of two-thirds of the Conoral Cooference, succeeding, shall suffice to alter any of the above reatrictions, extept the first stille.

ing, shall stime to alter any of the above teatrictions, except the first article.

These, comprise all the limitetions upon that hody when assembled by delegatos.

That the Generic Coafernee composed of the entire body of triveling preachers, and discipline of the chirch, possessed the power to reconstruct and raorgenize ils government, ecclesiasticol and temporal, into two or toare separate end distinct organizations, is a quection, about which, we think, no serious doubt can be well entertained.

These travaling preachers represented the sovereign power of the guvernment, and were responsible to no eartify tribinal for the mode and manner if its exercise. They were entirely free to exercise their own sense and judgment as to wint was the least pointy and, organization of the church, to necomplish the great object and design of the matters in whose service, they were entirely included in the languages of tioter the disciplinia, it is reform the confinent, and to apread scriptural holi-

We must have some evidence that they have serted with a portion of their sovereign power, that confessedly belonged to them at the first organization, clace that period; and, that they assembled, in the subsequent conferences, subject to the disability, before their powers can be distinguished from these originally possessed. We have not been referred to any such avidence, nor laws our own research.

in the subsequent conferences, subject to the disability, before their powars can be distinguibled from those originally possessed. We have not been referred to any such evidence, nor have our own researches discovered any, nor do we believe there are any recorded acts or declaration of this hody to the effect claimed. When jorndiction and nutthority, spiritual and temporot, in each General Conference from that of 1784 down to 1808 inclusive, ware the same, unlimited and unrestricted, possessed all the power which since the lattar period has belonged to the Genaral and Annual Conferences combined, undar the new organization, this is necessarily so, as all the power and authority possessed by the Annual Conferences have been conferred upon them from time to time, by the General Conference.

The argument that this body, previous to 1808, did not possess the competency to reorganize and reconstruct the government of the clurch, as they might think best for the great object of its mission, goes the length of denying that power to the concurrent action of both tha General end Annual Conferences since that period. And, that there is something in this association, and system of polity, differing so radically from all others, of which we have any knowledge, that, even the constituent and representative, aithough combining every elemant of power eppertaning to the government, can neither chonge nor modify it. For the ergument comes down to this. We cannot think it necessary to pursue this brench of the General Conference since the modificators of 1808, that therefore here the sure the modificators of the General Conference since the modificators of 1808 to a the ference have they modificators of the General Conference since the modificators of the General Conference.

Charter Fond.

These concern the exercise of the administrative newest of the Conference, and are intended as limitations upon them, unless concurred in by the Annual Conferences.

The powers conferred upon the General Conference are broad and unlimited, subject only to these checks in regulating the doctrine and discipline and property of the church. In all other aspects, and in every-thing else that concerns it, the body still represents the sovereign power, the same as before.

I ne practice of the ceneral conference, sanctice change in 1808, confirms this view. The connection of the Annual Upper Canada Conference with the Methodist Episcopal Church was disolved in 1828, and that body authorized to are itself, into an independent ecclesiastical establis nection differed from that of the Annual Conference within the United States; and that it realed upon a sort of compact between that Conference nod this church, and, therefore, held a different relation to it. But, on looking into the history and disciplina of the church, this will be found to be a misapprahension of that relation; and that the Canada Conference was brought within its folds in the same way as those lying upon the frontier settlements within the United States.

It will be found that as early as 1804, the Upper Canada districts were included in the New York Annual Conference, and continued as a part of it, the same as other districts, till 1812, when these districts, and also the Lower Canada districts, were included within Ganesea Conference. In 1816, the Lower Canada districts were embraced within the Naw York and New England Conference; and in the same year, the Bishops were-authorized, with the onnourrence of this Conference; to establish an Aanual Conference in Canadu; and in 1824, the Canade Conference is clouded the whole of the Upper Provinae—and thus it stood is 1828, when erected into an independent establish nents.

We have seen nothing in the history discipline

1828, when erected into an independent establishment.

We have seen nothing in the history, discipline or practice of the oburch, restricting its organization or Christian labors to the territorial limits of the United States; but much to show that both have been steadily devoted to the scoomplishment of the high and holy mission avowed in founding the church, namely, "to reform the continuant, and to spread aeriptural holinass over these lands."

As early as 1840, the republic of Texas was in-corporated into its bosom, and an Annual Confer-ence established. And we dount not that as the principles of civil liberty and religious tolara-tion work their way in the advancemant of civiliza-tion, over regions hitherto impenetrable to the mis-sionary, unless of a particular falth; this great work of organization and Christian labor will be carried on regardiess of territorial boundaries, or forms of secular government.

inken the place of one,—the same discipling fundant doctrine—and, all united in spreading fundant same guopel teachings, throughout the fundant same guopel teachings, throughout the fundant General Conference and Amand Conference continued to deprive them. Their right rest possible that the deprive them. Their right rest possible that the fund is properly administered. Looking at the position of these complishes and those they represent to account of the east of the General Conference of 1844, dividing the exclesivation of the deneral Conference of 1844, dividing the exclesivation of the Managara of the Conference of 1844, dividing the exclesivation of the Managara of the Man vention aven of the sixtii restrictive article he appropriates the fund for the bowlet of the travel and some propriates the fund for the bowlet of the traveling, supernumerary, and worn out preachers, the widows and orphans. It is this description of persons to whom it is destined by the adjudication that court. They ere not only within the description, but are, elso, the very persons haratofore in the eajoyment of it, and for whom it was originally designed. Granting that these persons have done wrongful cet, but are still laboring in the church, as heretofore, eacopt under a different meterly torritorial organization, they are covered by the spirit, if not by the letter; of the restrictive acticle.

Golveston-Its Commerce and Churches-Prospice Mr. Editor-Perhaps the readers of the Advocate would like to hear from your neighbors of the Island City of the Lone Star State. I'revious to annexation, there were a great many goods introduced into this port, directly from the various States of Europe. After annexation, this trade almost entirely ceased, and for several years Galveston rather declined as a point of commercial importance. About eighteen months ago the tide turned, and since that time many new buildings have been erected, property has advauced and business in reased, and this now bids fair to besome the great commercial emperium the Empire State of the South.

We are well supplied here with schools and churches, the means of intellectual, noral and religious culture. The Romanists, active to pre-occupy important points, have an elegant Cathedral aud a Conveut. Each of the leading Protestant denominations have well er-of worship. The first quarterly meeting Confereuce of the Methodist Church was held March 14, 1840, by the Rev. R. Aist ander, P. E., of Rutersville district During that year Rev. (now Doctor) Thos. O. Summers was appointed to take charge of the newly organized congregation. By his indefatigable labor hree lots were obtained in an eligible part of the city, and a beautiful chapel uilt. It bears the name of Ryland hapel, in honor of a liberal gentleman Washington City, who contributed eighteen hundred dollars towards its erection. Since that time the lets have been inclosed, and a comfortable parsonage built. During the present year the church has been thoroughly repaired, repainted, an end gallery provided; and urnished with neat Venetian blinds, and a fine toned boll.

In May last we held a pretracted meeting at which there were about thir ty conversions and additions to the hurch. Since that time we have en joyed great spiritual prosperity. On last Sunday night mourners were called to the altar, and several have during the week experienced religion. Meeting are held every night under the direction of the Presiding Elder and pastor sionary, unless of a particular faith, this great work of organization and Christian labor will be carried on regardless of territorial boundaries, or forms of eccular government.

In referring to the practice of the church, we must not ovariock the action of the General Conference of 1844 in the instance now before used forty-even to twenty-two, in a body representing more than four litousend traveling preachers in this communion; end, among whom, at its fair to suppose, were included men of the greatest experience and knowledge in the administration of the polity of the church. Indeed, on looking into the report of the debates of this sees ion, and into the disgussions upon the report of the obstess of this sees ion, and into the disgussions upon the report of the obstess of this sees ion, and into the disgussions upon the report of the obstess of this sees in the plan and the polity in or for a moment doubt that they were profoundly skilled in all the listory, practices and usages of the church, and especially upon one can fall to be impressed with the eminent ability and intelligence of the Church. The Texas Conference that the theory were profoundly skilled in all the listory, practices and usages of the church, and united with the eminent ability and intelligence of the Church. The Texas Conference to area the chonives into two separate eccissisation and the proceeded upon the assumption of unquestioned power to area the chonives into two separates of the case, independently of this another part of the case, independently of this another part of the case, independently of this another part of the case, independently of this quastion of property, thap power of severance is written upon every pogs of their proceedings.

Having now arrived the three conclusion that the General Conference of 1844 was competent to a special conference of 1844 was competent to the case, independently of this quastion of property, thap power of severance is written upon every pogs of their proceedings.

Mr. Editor-On the 11th instant the so-called 'public trial" of John S. Thrasher, Esq , a citizen of the United States, for treasun against the Queen and crown of Spain, was ordered for the 12th, before a military commission!

This public farce, to close a line of fabrication conducted for three weeks in the dark, took place on the day designited, at the Barracks of the Regiment of Barceluna, before what in other servicea would be denominated a Brigade Court-mar-tial; Brigadier Vargas was Provident of it, a mighty good judga of treason—at the point of the bayonet—but somewhat raw in law reading, of his own land, or the fundamental law of treaties. Mr. Thrasher was called up to answer to the exposition of the charge and proof, (the last not found, if I have the sense to know what constitutes testimony,) as made before the tribunal by the lawyer or "fiscal" of her Majesty. He was not allowed time to prepare for his defence; he had no previous knowledge of the crime alleged; no counsel, as guarantied by treaty between Spain and the United States. He was treated brutally dgeville hy lifs judges, interrupted in his defence and pro-Macon test, which he made with the energy of an upright and honest nature, and with the easa and grace of the accomplished gantleman.

He was permitted to file a written protest, which covered the whule granud, and caunot be recisted by Cuncha, I think, for there is no doubt of his lesire to be just; wherefure, we hope that the proceedings will not be approved. The senience asked for by the "fiscal," I am infurmed, was ap-proved by the Military Commission, and orders him into "presidio," in Spain, fur a term uf eight years. The bearing of Mr. Thrashar lifted him far abov his enemies throughout this outrage upon his rights, whether he be a Spanish subject or an American oitizen. But ae to the construction of the court that he was a subject of Spain, on account of his letter of domiciliation, it was made in contemptible ignorance or devilish malice to shut out inquiry on the part of his Government. He has not now, even

Mr. Calhoun's Works .- The first volume these works has been published, and will be read with eagarness by the public. It will be examined with the more ettention from the fact that it con-tains an exposition of his project for altering the constitution, so as to place the South on a footing with the North. At the time he referred to this aubject in the speech made in the Senate abortly before he diad, the people were much at a loss to before he dian, into people were fitted at 1 spoose to enjecture what remedy he designed to propose to effect his object; and we are under the impression that he intended that the Southern Stotes should o allowed an equality of Senators ueder all aircumstacces; but it seems, from a quotation from this volume of his works, published in the Southern Standard, that he meant to propose a dual execu-tive, one President to he from the South, and the other from the North. The following peragraph

tive, one President to he from the South, and the other from the North. The following pergreph einbraces his ideas on this subject:

"How the Constitution could best be modified, so at to effect the object, can anly be nuthoritatively determined by the emending power. It may be done is various ways. Among others, it might be effected through a re-organization of the Executive department; so that its powers, insteed of being vested, as they now ere, in a single officer, should be vested in two; to be so elected as that the two should be coestituted the special organs and representatives of the respective acctions in the Executive department of the Government, and requiring each to approve of the respective acctions in the Executive department of the Government, and requiring each to approve of the way. One might be, charged with the daministration of matters connected with the foreign relations of the country; and the other of such as ware connected with its donaestic institutions; the elections to be decided by lot. It would thus effect, more simply, what was intended by the original provisions of the Constitution, in giving to ous of the majorities composing the Government a decided prependerause in the Electoral College, and to the other majority a still more decided liftinence in the eventual choice—in case the College falled to elect a President. It was intended to effect on equilibrium between the larger end sinsiler States in this department, but which, in practice, has entirely failed, and by its failure, done much to distart the whole system, and to bring about the present dangerous state of things."

The detection by the State Auditor and controversy between State Printer (Mr. Whitely, ned the Auditor, Copt. Deeley.) The exemination is full and elaborate, abounding in "figures and facts, to convict Whiteley of deliberately attempting a freed upon the Treasury—first for $1,500, which was pussed by the Auditor, who alterword discovered it, and actified the other perty that he would deduct that amount from his pest account, which it was expected would soon be presented. Wheo the naxt occount was plessented, the Auditor, waread by his first experience, examined it closely, and detected another fraud of $1,506. This amount added to the $1,500, making $3,086; he proposed to deduct from the necount presented, $3,498, which would jeste only about $400. To this, Whitely objected. Denley proposed to astile it before a judicial trihunal. Whitley refused, and instand of which he commenced a series of newspaper ottacks upon the State Auditor, through his paper, the Banner, expecting to brow heat a public officer and force him to abandon his duty, ned to yield to his (Whiteley's) awinding diotation.

Then, as now, this house was the temporary home of the Solons and Lyonguages of the State, when their legislative duties draw them to the capital.

Mt. F——, the proprietor of the house at the time to which I allude, found that he had all soits of men in deal with, the State Representatives being composed of farmers, ship builders, land speculators and intheir metchants.

Of all men, however, the queerest customer was a Representative who had not certainly been choses for any remarkable custorical talents, or for any remarkable custorical talents, or for only extensive knawledge of political vectoring locations of private economy lingether predictions of a state following meeticale will show:

This state of offairs afforded a great deal of

NIGHT ... By HENRY W. LONDFELLOW. The day is done, and the darkness Falls from the wings of night, As a feather is wafted downward From en oegle lo bis flight. I see the lights of the village Gleam through the rain and the mist, And a feeling of sadness comes o'er me, That my soul comot testst- , A feeling of andness and longing, That is not akin to pain, And the mist resembles the rain. Come, read to me some poem, Some soble and heartfelt lay,
That shall soothe this rostless feeling, And hanish the thoughts of day. Not from the hards subline, Not from the bards sublime, For, like strains of material music, Their mighty thoughts suggest Lafe's endless toil and endeavor; And to-night I long for, mat. Read from some humble poet, .. Whose sougs guah from his heart
As showers from the clouds of summs Or tears from the eye-lids start.

Notes from Abroad. Mount Vesuvius - Ascent - Crater - Lava - Heren lancum - Descent to Pompen -lis streets, houses, oorn mill, puctures - A Painting of the Cross.

My Dear M.—Two days ago, in compaay with au American and an English elergyman, I asceuded Monnt Vesuvins. We teck a carriage and drove some tifteen miles to the spot where guides and mules were to he had for the nsecut, which is near the base of the n.euntain. the sernbby description, called ia Louisiana ereele. In riding some two miles farther, we passed through fields of lava barren, black and dssolate, as if they had passed through a crucible. Distiact streams of lava, as they had flowed and congenled, were easily detected. Lava of any censiderable depth cools very slowly, retaining its heat for years: The mountain is not high, and looks as if ene might run up to the top in a few

We alighted, and begau to step our way npen the stones and loose saud, and refused any assistance from the guides; but about half way up we found onrindeed; the very first matter, after getting ip, was a stiff quarrel about the quid pro quo. I left my American friend to settle for the party, and looked ing frem fissures, and threatening to emit flame every moment. The air was like that of a sulphurie acid chamber; my steel watch-chain was corroded, and though I breatbed through my handkerchisf, my throat was sore from it for a

Walking for several hundred yards upon this plain, we came to an asceut of a few feet, and as we were climbing up raised our heads to look out, as we ox peeted, upou another smoking flat; but what was our surprise and terror, as we looked over, to see ourselves upon the rim of a round gulf fifteen huudred feet across, shaped like a furnace, and going down precipitonsly to the vory howels of the monntain. At the vory hottom the lava heaved and puffed like boiling resin. The sides were smoking like a caldren, and yellow with sulphur. saw before us the mouth of the Pit. Its appearance was that of a house which has had the roof and one balf the uppor story destroyed by fire, excepting that it bore no traces of coal or even of smoke. In the center of the court is a small reservoir, or distern. Underneath the porticos were wine cel lars, running their whole length, and six or seven feet deep. In thom are rows of large earthen wine bottlos and oil bottles. And in this cellar a skeloton, supposed to be that of Diomed himself, was discovered holding a key in one hand, and in the other coins and gold ornaments; behind this, another holding bronze and silver vases. A few small openings were left, about twelve inches long hy one and a half wide, harely sufficient to give light to the cellar, yet through these openings the fine ashes of the cruption, almost impalpabls, filled the cellar to its ceiling and penotrated into every jar, filling it to are ornamented in the floor and feeiling with mosaics and frescoes. The streots were closely built, the building lots small and entirely covered, indicative of a large, thrifty city, and which it was in the days of Tacitus, and reckoned then one of the most populous in the Campagna. The comic and tragio Theatres, and a largo Ampbitheatre, indicate its size at the time of the overthrow. About one half of it has been uncovered. It was overwhelmed, may be iu a single night, by a shower of ashes,

The skeletons of sixty persons were found in the town, those of persons who probably, were unable to move, or who delayed, vainly hoping that the calamity would soon pass. The town was com-pletely covered, to the depth of some five or six feet over its highest point. Bofore its discovery, it must have presented the appearance of an irregular mound, extending one or two miles, It s romarkahlo that it was only about the middle of the last century that some traces of the city were found in planting a vineyard. Charles III. first ordered exeavations to be made; which have been carried on with more or less activity until the present day. The most of the wall paintings, mo

"The good man, he was now gotting old, towards skuty perhops; and gove you the idea of at life that had been full of sufferings; a life heavy-inden, half-vanquished, still swimming painfully in some of manifold physical and other bewilderment. Brow end head were round, and of massive weight, but the face was flabby and Irresolate. The deep eyes, of a light hazel, were as full of sorrow as of imprivation; confused pain looked mildly from them, as in a kied of mild satonishment. The whole figure and air, good and amiable otherwise, might be called flabby and irresolate; anyreselve of weakness under possibility of strength. Eriscopal - Bishop Capera arrived n New Orleans yesterday, direct from the west of Arkansas Conference. His health is alightly improved since leaving Camden, but even now is far below working point, as most men would indge. In forty-three years of "itineranov for him to turn saide from the path of APPOINTMENTS is an unprecodented thing. It goes hard with him; we see it does. The flesh fails in the works but the heart does not." !!

The two Texas Conferences will be deprived of his services, which, though rendered at great personal inconvenionce, have been invaluable to the Arcansas Conference, so long deprived of Episcopal visitation! After Sabbath the Bishop will proceed homeward, breaking the travel by resting on the Way tard affe to 1 1

Having given our readers the deois ion of the Court in the matter of the Church Suit, we now give them the opinions of the Church papers, on this decision, as they have come to us better Zion's Herald remarks (1116)

There will doubtless be no little disappointment among our people respecting this decision, and its grounds while others will account for it on the pro-slavery disposition which has predominated in the region of the trial, and which has all along been referred to as a probably fatal obstacle to the views of the Northern Church, both at New York and Washington. Meanwhile a large majority of the Church will accept the decision as an impartial rendering of the law, and will feel relieved by terminates. The Northern Church has hle If the court has removed the only embarrassment, or at least the responsibility of it, the Church, according to its frequent protestations, must generally feel gratified at the rellef, and ready to meet the olaim "

The editor, who has all along expressed himself in a friendly manner on this subject, after taking exceptions to the constitutional principles on which the decision was made out, adds :

All that the South will get by the decision we wished to allow it, though on other conditions. While we may have something to say against the rendering of the court, we shall not be-grudge our Southern brethren the results May our common Lord abundantly bless them in their success. Had they failed, our proposition would have been to convert the Book Concern into in establishment exclusively for the diffusion of religions literature, separating from it our periodicals, abandoning all revenues or dividends from it, and making a contract with the South by which it should be entitled to books at cost This would enable It to have Its Southern depositories and agents, and to provide its stock at a rate actually below what it can provide it for in the

The Northern Advocate says Of course, the decision is in favor of the claimanta. In the existing posture of political affairs, nothing else was to be expected. While politicians are so assiduous in growing cotton, Judges must be allowed to raise their share of this useful article. The case, in itself, is one of the plainest that ever came be-fore a judicatory, whether ecclesiaatical, ion of the times can account for the atrange disposition which has been made of it. The Judge a decision is a feeble repetition of arguments—if arguments they may be called—which have been refuted a thousand times, and which, at best, were scarcely desorving of serious consideration.

Our brother of Anburn, who has rather been "winking" at the late Christians outrage and the like, thus coneludes !

The Book Concern is an institution

however, no liope of success. In these eace of slavery, there is little prospect of an equitable and importial adjudica-tion in the courts. Judges may intend io wrong, but they are swaved by the imes-infected with the mania of upholding the Union, and to that overy thing must be sacrificed.

. The Buffalo Advocate thus comments: "With this decision the Southern Church receives a vast amount of money. lollars must aow be divided, in some way accordant to the decision above given. The result is as we anticipated would be, and we are pleased to puhish the finale of a long and vexatious es for them, or help them 'to huild for itigation - during-tho continuance of which scandal and insult has played a prominent part."

Tho Ch. Ad. and Journal, which will doubtless inform as whether an appeal will be taken or not, has not yet come to hand. We look for it with interest. The R. C. Advocate receives the news in this wise: "Well, this is just what we have all along anticipated, and nothing else. We were fully persuaded that when men, not interested in the matter, and who were not to be benefitted by the decision, oamo, to mako up a judgement, they would decide just as the United States Judges have done. What olse could honesty and justice dictate, or a regard for equity do? Since the decision reached us, we have folt a large measnre of sympathy for our quandam friends about 200 Mulberry street; and many rocolloctions of the General Conforence f 1848, have orowded upon ns. How umiliating must it be to "poor old Be-sarius" to witness this defeat of all his coils! How mortifying to Dr. George eok to find out after all that Judgo veleon, in his remarks at the close of he trial, was not misapprehended by the South ! How sad to all to feel jnsco ungrasping their gripe upon "the inda." I am happy to have seen a change for good taking place in the popular mind at the North, and especially in parts of New England, on this whole subject. I think wise and good men are becoming more and more scuad every day in their faith, feeling and practice respecting the existence of the black race providentially introduced into legal service in his ocuntry.

But please excuse this long letter. I But please excuse this long letter. I intended simply a friendly note, informing you of my appointment, and the time of the sailing of our vessel from

Greenville, Miss. Conf.

Mr. Editor-As the Conference year s drawing to a close, it may not be respecting the Greenville charge.

I hoped, in the early part of the year, to have been able, before this, to give the friende of religion a more cheering the friends. account of my work than I am at pre sent able to give. Still I will say to the praise of our common Lord, that there is nothing in the state of things here, of which I am aware, that should cause despondency: while there is much to encourage hope. It is true but few of the colored people have joined its Church, hitherto, this year; and no white persons have joined since our quarterly meeting in the spring. Atto the former, I found the societies, in most instances, very much disorganied and generally in a dull and lukewarm tate; and it soomed injudicions to urge much the joining of the Church, until the Church itself should be in a better state. Now, howover, the names of the members are all enrolled in good clusbooks, and there has been an accession of abent ten new members. We have also had a few (too few) profession of conversion among the colored people of which a remarkable case was that of an old woman of Mrs. Halsey, snpposed to be hetween ninety and a huadred year, old, who died in great pesco a short time after a most hopeful profession of conversion." Most of my meetings with the black people have been attended with much apparently deep feeling, and many of them have, I trust, been truly and lastingly profitable. O, may I ment these sable brethrea in a brighter and botter world.

I have regularly oatechized about one hundred and sixty children every two weeks, and have often been delighted in observing the interest and alacrity with which they would hasten to the catechizing, and respond to the questions There is still, on all the plantations but one, (Blantonia,) a great desideratum to the facilities of the preacher, and the profit of the black people, and that is commodions and comfortable chapel This, we have good hope, will soon be supplied on every plantation on the mis-

Our last quarterly meeting com-menced on the last Thursday in Octo-ber, and closed on the first Sinday in November. We had excellent preachiag hy Brother Camphell, our P. Elder, and Brother R. L. Walker, of New Or leans, and, upon the whole, a very inte-resting meeting. Here is a commanity of wealthy, generous and hospitable people, who are kind to ministers, and friendly to the Gospel. O, when shall their hearts he offeetually touched by the Spirit of the Gospel?

How many of us are earnestly longing to do good, and vainly regretting our inability to cause men to glorify God—are idly thinking without acting, and wishing day after day for talent and exportunity, without using that already giver! or rather, who are not thus living? But, young Christian, particularly should this come home to you, for surely your heart is burning to advance the Master's kingdom, and your soul lamenting your unprofitableness. It may be, like Naaman of old, you are thinking to "de some great thing," if so, I can tell you nothing; but if willing to act the part of the "little maid," heed one moment and I will point to a field where you can labor, and through God accomplish much. On a shoet before me is a note of a country Sabbath, it says, "spent the ovening in catechizing and talking to the negroes." These words bring up a seene of thrilling interest. Time was when the schoolmaster was abroad, and enlous were the lesson in taught. For "ten dallers a month, and bearded round," the schoolars had the advantage of all he knew, and, therewish school committees and cilizens declared themselves "perfectly sausfied," and even boasted of the superior educational advantages their children enjoyed. The remembrance of such teachers, however, lives now only in the memory of the oldest inhabitants, for State Normal Schools have compelled ignorance and improvement. The physical is no longer paramount, but the mental is the ascendant. To be a teacher now, it is requisite that the parithave, at least; a knowledge in his own mother tongue, and that his agods of imparting instruction, the mind, nut the back and legs, of the pupil be acted upon, and that books, not birth shall be the medians.

Mr. Chairman—In replying to your call, I heve thought it might not be uninteresting to state the cause and occasion of the writing of that popular little poem on the "Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers," by Mrs. Hemans. During e short and delightful stay at her house in Deblia, Ireland, in July, 1834. I had a long conversation with her. She expressed a deep interest in the United States, and said there she had been better enderstood in Massachusetts than in England. She uttered with deep feeling her profumed gratuade to Professor Norton, of Cambridge, for the deligate and efficient manner in which he had commended her to the American public; for the generosity with which he had published, at his own risk, a beautiful within the last content of the probation of the states and then sent his approbation of her lattest substantial and unequivocal form, he-had poblished, at his own risk, a benuifful chition of all her. works, and then sent his approbation

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1851.

The "Croton River," Running the Wrong Way.

Our Northern friends profess to be ite shocked at the decision of Judge cleon, not so much on account of the property as the principles is colved :-Conference. Now, it really seems to us that if they are satisfied about money matters, they ought to say nothing about the principles—for they are the very principles first advanced, dethe very principles first advanced, de

In the memorable General Confer 1844, the Northern members decided as to the expediency of aking way, summarily, with Bishop Andrew, But they halted on a law int. Was it in the power of that body to take this step? Dr. Hamlins came to their relief. He made his famous stitutional argument, olaiming for the General Conference suprems lagislative, judical and executive functions It was the great "Croton River" of power, (a happy figure for New York ty) from which all reservoirs and distributing streams were fed. Dr. Hamline made the speech, and the speech made him a Bishop. The last impediment was removed, and the un-But now the tables are turned. I is good bull that has gored my ox, and that alters the case. The Christian Advocate and Jonrnal, 20th ult., before us, refering to Judge Nelson's centralication view, says:

" If the decision under consideration meraly affected the question of property, we should consider it a matter of small consequence; but as it really invests the General Conference with a most dangerous power, and, consequently, ie cal-culated to bring the fundamental prinples of our ecclesiastical govornment to discredit, we cannot allow it to pass

Why was this not thought of before? and with what grace can the official itor exclaim at it as a "novel viow our coonomy ?"

Our Boston cotemporary takes simi lar but stronger exceptions to principles arsed, when it suited their purpose by the whole Northern esotion of Meth-

"We are not opposed to the division We are not opposed to the division of the property; we have shown this fully heretolore; but we are opposed to the constructions which these lawyers put upon our coolesiastical system—our structions which must prove seriously extremental to Methodism North and th; and which chould call forth the sponstrances of both parties in this in the law of the session are reliable, Methodism is esfielly an hierarchical despotism, and ediate and thorough revision toddapt it to our times and our conn try.

These lawyers!" Lawyer Nelson Johnson did not olaim more power for the General Conference in 1851. than lawyer Hamline did in 1844.

We have no disposition to exult unthe things. The remembrance of cannot to abate their dissatisfac-They have as clear a right to the fineiples as we have to the property.

The most of our readers, no doubt feel thankful that the disagreeable and protracted suit between our brethren of the North and ourselves, has resulted in a decision which gives to us a share of the Book Concern. Yes, resulted, and, we dare to believe, terminated in a decision which has placed us before the public in a just light: which regards us not as schismatics, but as the Southern division of the M. E. Church in the United States. The editor of the Ch. Advocate and Journal hints that we are at the end of only one suit, indeed only the first stage of that, and says there are three more. He will pardon us if, dispite his cruel comfort, we hope somewhat from the public opinion of the membership of the Church North, which is in favor of our having the money from those preschers and those Confersnees who have affirmed a wish to do instice could they only see their way, constitutionally, clear; from the repent ing character of the late Conferences North, and the conservative character of their General Conference Delegatee elect; from the expense of the law; from the able decision of Judge Nelson and the hopeless grounds for an appeal; somewhat from the fact that the opinion of the official editor does not ich as much with the North now as It did before his silent attendance at a tein Auti-Fugitive Slave Law Meet-, hold in the city of New York.

The editor argues the case against the judge, but It is hard work; and the regiment ends like a sermon. The determination of the case in our favor to have entered into any argument upor

neither sought a new direction for the produce of the Book Concern, or to destroy the plan of our itinerant general

An itinerant general enperintendency is as much a feature of the Church North now as it ever was, and fully as much a part of the economy of the Church South as of the Church North. Methodism, in all its vital parts, has not been, and cannot lee, effected by mere territorial limitation; and whather the field be a whole continent or half a one, all the States or half the States, it can have both its doctrine and discipline, s general superintendency and an itinerant ministry. The term "general" superintendency is in opposition solely to a Diocesan superintendency.

The action of the General Confarnoe of 1844 was no less constitutional than it was extraordinary, and as necessary as it was constitutional. It was the only provision which could have been made for continuing the one dasign and prime work of Methodism amongst a people who had become irrscencilably divided in opinion upon a great moral question. It was in fact a onstitutional expedient to preserve to Methodism in the United States an Itiperant General Superintendency and an Itinsrant Ministry, and to continue te officiency in apreading Scriptural holiness thronghout these lands.

We make no donbt that those who ome after us will regard the action of the General Conference of 1844 as equally extraordinary, constitutional, necessary and providential.

Archbishop Hughes' Speech.

This distinguished servent of the Pope is one of the best platform speakers in the country. We apprehend he is too free spoken for the good of his canss. His gift of speech-making suits the American taste finely, and he can hardly refrain from it. But it betrays him into expressions (honest, no donbt that are liable to the severest oriticism. and leads him out, into vulnerable positions. He is singularly in advance of ths underground policy of modern Romanism. Is this man a Popish feeler? Is this style of varnaoular, open, bold declaration of principle and purpose, which is seen in him, an experiment upon public opinion? We augur for it. not the best success. It will not take in this country, where the pross is free. Popery cannot venture safsly into the light, nor abide public discussion. The oloister snits it, still, better than the latform. It is not yet tims to abandon a style of communication which proceeds forth soldom, and then in an nnknown tongue."

Archbishop Hughes delivered on 18th nlt. a speech, at a meeting in New York for the purpose of collecting funds to eetablish a Catholio University in Ireland, which has met a just and soathing quite enough for all the patience that is left. The rebuke from the republican press of the country—especially from the New York. Times and the New Orleans Delta. The speech alludee to the patriot of Hungary in honost bltterness. Honest we say: for what concord hath Romanism with Republicanism? The politics Watching Spirits by Mrs. Ellet. Now he is whlg and now tory; now a progressive democrat and now a rigid conservative. Upon the Kossuth portion of this unfortunate and famous speech, the Delta of the 29th ult., in true American tone, thus remarks: "The bitterness and injustion of the Archbishop's allusione to the distin-guished Hungarian, may find some pal-liation in the fact that the prelate looked upon a certain allusion of Kossuth fin an English speech] as intended to reflect upon the Church of which the speaker is a conspiouous servant. On examination, however, we find that Kossnth's reference was to certain Jesuit intrigues volved the reputation or character of the Catholic Church, any more than an allusion to the Absolutism of Prussia would involve a reproach or cenenre on the character of Protestantism, which is the prevalent religion of that kingdom. Uertainly the Archbishop does not mean to assume that individuals, priests and officials, of the Catholio Church, have never ongaged on the side of despotism against republicanism, or that the character of a vast denomina-tion of Christians can be ceriously compromised by the acts of a few individual

"This is the extent of the allusion of Kossnth, which has awoke ench wrath in the bosom of the Archbishop. Kosauth is a Protestant, but he was called to the Presidency of Hungary by a peo-ple, the majority of whom were Catho-lics. He enjoyed the confidence of all denominations, because he upheld religious freedom. He offended only the agents and representatives of the absolutism and hierarchy of Austria and Rome—and to them he refers, as enemies of liberty. That they were Jesuits is not remarkable, since the government of Austria is Catholio. Does page turned loose the great "Croton Archbishop Hughee presume so far upon the Church North, and on the religious prejudices of Catholies, the brother struggles vainly against its impetuous foods. Pensacola-Its Churches, five Romanism Dom vival Never Kumun - History of Methodism - Bi-

Mr. Editor-1 propose to give you s brief outline of the spiritual condition of Pensacola. There are five churches in the city—four Protestant and one Catholic. Catholicism is the dominant religion of the place. More than half he population actually bolong to that communiou, while many of the remaining portion are swayed by its influeuce. And hence there is a manifest lack of spirituality throughout the religious community. I must say, hewaver, in ustice to the Catholics that many of hem are free from that exclusive bigetry and intolerance which is too often manifested by them.

Each of the Protestant ehurches is supplied with a regular pastor, except the Baptist. That was supplied last year, and is vacant now, only for the want of funds to support a minister. .

The Protestant congregations are gen-orally small, as might be expected, when we consider that they are supplied principally from the American population.
The gambling establishment, to the shame of the city, has its Sunday queta of the non-church-going.

It is much to be regretted that there is not that unity of Christian feeling thie world is being leavened through its and effort amongst the Protestant de very acre by the Church of God, for phich it was oreated. During the last that should be. Each church seems to fifty years, the Punjauh of India has be reared upon its own basis, and strug-been added to the field, free to the gling alone for its own existenes. To sickle; Turkey has just been thrown the want of social Christian feeling and open, by the firman of the Sultan, pro- united chort may be attributable the teeting converted Moslems. Russia has singular fact that such a thing as a repermitted the circulation of the Tract vival of religion has never been known in Pensacola. Semo few of the membership of the different churches, however, imbibing the true spirit of the Gospel, refuse to be swayed by the sectarian example of their pastors. They are not only ing to " live and let live," hut they bid led-speed to the Gospel, preached in its purity by whomsoever it may be. Agreeably to the hest information I cau get, Methodism was introduced into this place upwards of twenty years ago. And there is probably no place in the United States whore it-has struggledongor and harder for existence. It has mot with opposition at every step, and honco its progress has heeu slow and unsteady. There is probably no place in the bounds of American Methodism, where there are so many counter influences operating upon a small population. Then a degree of experience in the ministry is requisite even to the maintenance of position, which has not always fallen to our lot hero. . Tho stop taken hy the Alahama Conference, a few years ago, in withdrawing her ministry from this place, has proven unfortunate to the Church. The result was, most of our members joined other churches, some of whom will not return. Others of the permanent ditizens who would have joined the Methodists, ars now he youd their rosch.

Bishop Androw once rsmarked, "We now recruit." So the vacated post has again been resumed, but the most we can do at this moment is to guard it. ged to look to the future with confident hope of success, from the fact that Methodism is now holding a better rank among her sister denominations than she has hitherto done.

I should not omit to inform you that Protestantism, in her efforts to do good in this place, has experienced quite a Bibleburning. Some years ago there was an effort made to circulate Bibles, Testamants and Tracts, printed in different languages to suit the community. But ble paper I wish to call the attention of the offort was soon arrested, as I learn, by the ban of the priest, under whose Brother Mc Tyerre—God has graciously revived his work at Mt. Zion Church. We commenced a meeting on the 15th inst., which was protracted nine days; and resulted in great profit to the Church. Many who had grown oldd were greetly quickened, and hetween twonty and thirty happy conversions took place. Among the number of conversions, one aged man, upwards of three score and ten years, was powerfully converted. We joined in society thirty-four whites and four colored. At our third quarterly meeting, which was held in September, we had twenty conversions and twenty-six accessions. To God be all the glory.

She remonstrated with him for wearing such a thing. "Pol!" said he, "I'll be known through all my rag!"

We have just closed a protracted meeting, which has resulted in ahout eighteen conversions and fifteen accessions to the Church. Compared with many other revivels. resulted in ahout eighteen conversions and fifteen accessions to the Church. Compared with many other revivals. this number seems very small; hut oonsidering the difficulties with which Methodism is surrounded here, we are disposed to regard the occasion as one of great interest to this community. The presence of God was manifested in great power among the members of the Church, and many hearts were filled to over-flowing with his precious love.

In regard to Georgey, one of my friends bere lately remarked that he was the opposite of Kosouth—" Kosouth was a Hungarian and nothing lels—Georgey was anything but a Hungarian!" There is much truit in the remark. Georgey never has had the heart sympathy with either the very last of the weaknesses of this country ness. A never has had the least sympathy with either he vir the out the weaknesses of his countrymen. I man of cold, stern ratore, of few words and trementions deed; he always longhed over the Magyar fire, eloquence and patriotism. Despite bil lateness he displayed at last, there is something very striking about his character. If he was a traintr, he was no roomen one.

His career commenced in a characteristic way, hy his hanging up, when he was only a major, one of the first noblemen in Hungary for treachery, as sternly and indifferently as if the man had been a rice away drummer. The affair nade a great noblem and hought his is me very prominently before the are my and monterently as 4 the man had been a rin away drindmer. The affair made a great role and honghr his none very prominently before the public. He after course was consistent with this as cool in a discharge of grape, his officers say, as he was at the requicil board.

They have told me they have often seen him in the model of a fearful charge around him, sitting a questy on his horse, with a pixto in hand-hut not for the enemy. The moment he saw man flinch he shot him as onceledingly as if he had been a dog. He seemed to others uttenly indifferent to what men usually long after. He always professed, amid his most splendid achievements, he would rather be treaching chemistry than leading an army. When Kossuth sent him, an one occasion, 250,000 guilders ($100,000 to make a provision for his future, and, in order not to offend him, an eloged it sails wife, he bent it hack, with the remark, "1 faball, not needst, and my wife, can be green and in secape, I ran be professor abroad; conquered, and I secape, I ran be professor abroad;

this meritain deporations and orders of bosos; ne put them aside with a sucer, that such gawgaws, were not the things for a republic.

People have told me that after the surming of the ring, the only words on the lips of the recopie and file army, was "Georgey! Georgey!" bot with all the demonstrations before his quarters, he never howed himself, and "remained coldly within-inceed, expressing limself that "this very bombarders) was the unit of Hungary!" eed, expressing himself that "the rent was the ruin of Hungary!"

ment was the turn of Hungary!"

He always needed at every hody, even the rends who idolized him; and was almost the only and in Hungary who was perfectly Indifferent inder Kossuth's eloquence. Amid the splendidly reseal Hungarian officers, he always appeared in a old Mejor's coat and in hous, which he had not have off reshape for a week. A lady told me that ahe not him after the taking of Oben, in a ville looking roat, with a great hole in one of the elbaws.

She remonstrated with him for wearing such a

"The brave soldiers who had followed him through his long and weary ratten, with coabakes confidence and love, helieving that their "Georgey" would come out right at last, were abandoosd to Acostrian dungeons, or left to be drafted into the "imperial regiments." He saved nothing bot his own toiserable life. No man in Hongary helieves that he did this maliguant treachery for guld, It was all from his middled pride. She interty-two years old, and when taken from the miserable hovel where she and a sister of hors who died three or foor years ago, had lived, shunsal solitary, and in abject poverty for mdny-years, the poor old creatore was sitting, without s spark of the coldest of the season.

The segregate values of rice exported during the last fiscal year, as compared with the previous year, also exhibit a decrease emounting to $460,917, which, with a decline in the values of the apports of richacoo for the same period, make the aggregate dacrease in these two articles of $1,156,751.

The policy which dictated a low rate of dutles on foreign merchandise, it was thought by those whit promoted and established it, would tend to benefit the farming population of this country by increasing site its model of this country by increasing site its model. The protection of our seath western fronter, and of the adjacent Mexican States, ogainst the Indian tribes within our border, has oloimed my cernest and constant sitention. "Congress having failed, at the last session, to adopt my recommendation their an additional regiment of mounted man opecinity adspied to that service that could properly be apared from other quarters have been concentrated on the frontier, and officers of high reputation selected to command them." A new arrangement of the military pusts has also been made, whereby the troops are brought nearer to the Mexican frontier and to the tribus they are, intended to overowe. Sufficient time has mit yet elopsed to' recline all they will eliectually check their marauding expeditions. The nature of the country, which furnishes little for the support—of an army—and abounds in places of refuge and concealment, is remarkably well adapted to this predatory warfare; and we can scarcely hope that any military force, combined with the greetest vigilance, can entirely suppress it.

By the treety of Guadalupe Hidalgo we are

gies of the child of faith, just ushering into life. The conditions of its being, as a sublime moral principlo, and the basis on which rests the structure of probationary character, require such a severe mitiatory struggle. He is its finisher; and trains it, through a course of suc cessive conflicts, that call into continuous activity its heaven-born energies. Although he has net appointed the soones themselves, through which faith must pass, in its employment of schooling the deathless spirit for a blissful eternity; yet he has appointed, that field should pass through seenes and circumstances of trial, which result from the restless uctivity of the gents by which the child of faith is surrounded-the world: " For we wrostle not against nest and blood, but ugainst principalities against nowers against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

. Let us glance at the various ways, by which taith is tried, amidst the scenes in which it is, for a short season, appointed to exercise and develop its in vincible energies.

Aside from the general sense, in which God may he said to try all human faith, there are special interpositions of his own, hy which he exercises the believer. and protracted wrestling, by withholding the answer aimed at by his faith, and disabling his physical frame, already weakened by long and earnest struggles. Thus 'God in Christ,' tried the woman of Syrophonieia, when beseeching for the healing of her daughter. Thus too, every extraordinary oall, that he makes upon the man of faith, to relinquish worldly hopes and reliances in order te prosecute special enterprises, and every apparent delay, that he makes in answer ing the urgent petition of a sincore and letermined faith, are so many direct trials of that mighty principle of moral regeneration and odification, which he thus exercises and strengthen

It is not for one, whose faith is thus tried, to scan God's purposes, to scrus timize the reasons of his conduct, to pause in his struggles that he may study whether or not, the results of his offorts shall he such as scem to him desirable If amid the darkness which now seems to surround his pathway, God requires him to stay himself on the Divine allsufficiency, it is his duty and privilege to submit; although overy tie and fond affection of nature should be shocked and shivered to atoms, and every natural reliance descrited in order to yield to and obey the Divlne hehest. If God delays to answer his petitions, it is not for him to question God's faithfulness, to impugn his justice to presume, that these petitions reach not God's ear, uor meet his favor and acceptance. It is his to believe, that he does now recoive full value for every effort of his faith; though the full adjustment of the account, be seemingly delayed, to believe that every effort is leading him nearer and nearer to the happy consumation of his hopes. Ceasing to trust, and turning aside to speculate upon the causes of his trying position, and to dovise means to rendon his petitions more proplitious, is to for got, that the only grounds of his success is the mediation of Jesus, and to for-sake the only way, which pursued to the end, will lead him to the goal of deliveranco-and-triumph. Ills only means of success is faith, that he is now employing; while he employs it, he is in the way of safety; the moment he relaxes in hts vigorous exercise, he declines into paths of perplexity and poril.

Just here, a very great and pernicions orror is apt to arise, fatal to the exercise of faitb; und it is strange thut many pious and woll meaning porsons omploy it, for the purpose of oncouraging faith, plished nanght; while they have here every moment nearing the point of sneeds, "Perhaps God is trying you, the blessing is not for you more, you must wait, and they do? But these traisms, harmless in themselves, contain a deeper meaning than appears on their face. They mean that God is not willing to grant, the blessing now, because he has set a time; and that time must rell around, ere the blessing can be imparted. How do they know, that God has set, a time? The declares that a now is the day of salt vation;" that he "waiteth—to he grant vation;" that he waiteth—to he grant vation; the first blessing good cause. We now open our behalt vate of our minusters in behalf the day of our very substitute, the general operations of the Society. The effect was, to increase, a hundred the day. He the day of our minusters in behalf the day of our very substitute, the grant vations of the society. The effect was, to increase, a hundred to the general operati form of trial, does not wait for a cortain time to roll around when the imagined period of its trial shall terminate, but perseveres in expecting an answer, every moment; well knewing, that when it shall have reached the appropriate degree of intonsity, be that period longor or shorter, it shall grasp its objects; and that it is not God who tarries, but that the time of its discipline shortens or lengthcus in proportion to the carn estness of its own exertions. These eb servations are meant to apply to faith as exercised in prayer.

A sense of personal demerit, although necessarily implied in faith, nevertheless often operates to try it severely. Can a God so holy, regard one so cerrupt; u God of such majesty, regard one so ab ject? cries out the weeping penitent. Will he still continue to be gracious, and oxtend returning favor, to one who has so often transgressed? asks the struggling probationer as creoping andstunging probationer as creoping and stumbling, with Bunyan's pilgrim, he makes his way up the steps of the hill of the state of the hill of the state of the hill of the state of the king of Israel. And is it to me, who am less than the least of all saints, that this grace is given? wonderingly exclaims, that this grace is given? ingly exclaims the soul whose 'close communiou with God, leads him from day to day to greater heights of love, aud profoundor depths of humility tracted the Divine favor. What particular act of mine, he asks, has drawn upon me this new manifestation of Di vine grace? He asks, and looks to see, and falls. Faith has naught to do, but look at Christ; then will it experience human helplessness and Divine suffi-

Business and Prayer.-If a professed disciple would not have his secular business hoeome as a mill-stone about his neck to drown him in perdition, he must he a man of prayer; he must daily socare spiritual communion with God. It he suffer his business to consume his time and spirits, so as to deprive him of mammon eat up his service of God. No one who helieves that God answers prayer, will think of omitting either secret or family devotion for want of time, even when business is unusually urgout. Which is worth most to you or your ation. Some of our elder Bishops and family, an additional period of your own Doctors of Divinity were among the first unblessed labor, or the blessing of God one your efforts, won by spending that one of the first Publishing Committee; time in pleading with him in prayer? The plea of want of time is essentially to great Methodist Book Concern in New York, we should have had a Meth-odist in that Committee through all the atheistical; none should urge it but those who regard pruyer as au empty mockery, that never roceives an answer from the Lord. Let the day begin with communion with God- Let the disciple pass the whole day in the spirit of prayer, and ull its duties will become spiritual dutles, and all its scouos be inscribed are not represented in that Committee. If we holiness to the Lord."

But this must be real communion—if we have no voice in the manage-with God; und not a mere formal prayer. Many morning prayers are a sort of pay-fault,—the blame is ours; it does not lie ing compliments to the Most High. A at the door of the American Tract So

He delares that a now is the day of salvation; that he "waiteth—to he gradious;" and intreats "to-day, if ye will hear his voice;" and says that he that "asketh, receiveth." Faith must appropriate at the moment of its existence, and to the extent of its capacity. If the seeker of God's blessing is not answered, it is because his faith does not desorve the auswer required. True, Ged tries it is because his faith does not desorve it, but that very trial is disciplining faith, to a more very trial is disciplining faith, to a more very trial is disciplining the seeker's heart. His faith heart having become warm in the morn. there may not be the least degree of unbelief in the seeker's heart. His faith heart having become warm in the morning, it needs but little to restore its idle for the Methodists' to stand along the seu-shore. It is the least, that God hears and approves, yet his faith may not be of that degree a lively sense of God's presence. Pastors are put in charge of high trusts. They watch as these who must give account. They hold a relation to others, not of their own procuring, that involves them in a responsibility which no bonds or sureties can cover - the blood of souls. Little do these seem to think of their responsibility who are over quarreling with pastors about their power.

We would respectfully and carnestly solicit the attention of the whole Church to the facts in regard to the present condition of our Missionary Treasury, and the prespect before us. From the largely increased appropriations of the present above the past year, and the small increase in the collections of some of the Conferences, and decrease in others, it is to be feared that great difficulty will exist in meeting those drafts: This would be an event deeply to be deplored by every member of the Church, and yet who wishes one mission, or one this be promptly and unitedly loade, and all shall be well. Let not this are ticle (which is of purpose in few words) be read and then laid aside, to be fergotten, as is too often the case, with apcals of similar character, but let each one resolve upon action—immediate ac-tion—and give of their substance according to their ability; and Oh, who cannot and will not in this noble cause give according to the necessity and emergency which new exists? that loves God and the souls of men-for whom Christ diod, can refuse? In the midst of this subline and terrible storm Dame Partington, who lived upon the beach, was seen at the door of her house with mop and pattens, trundling her mop, squeezing out the seawater and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused. Mrs Partington's spirit was up; but I need not tell you that the contest was une qual. The Atlantio Occan beat Mrs. Partington. To the Rev. E. W. Schon, D. D., Secretary of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church Santh. Dear Brother—We now present to you our Fourth Quarterly Report. Since our last we have received nine ou pro-hation; one member has died in the faith, giving glory to the God of Mis-sions. We have baptized tifty-one children ; for we never have seen water -too ou the heads of children, though we have known it too searce to bury adults in, We have preached from three to live times each Subbath during the most of the year. The patrens of this mission so far us we have been able to ascertain them, but to the administration. are willing it should be continued. We have not yet heard a dissenting voice The prespects for the support of this Mission are quite gleony; the patrons seem unwilling to give more for its sup-port this year thau the past year. The expenses of the Mission this year are much more than they have ever been before, and we feel confident that we will be left far hehiud in financial matters. There are millious of wealth on this mission; the crops and the health good. One deliar per head for each hand that works in the field would defray the entire expense of the Mission. Some few of the patrons are willing to give that much for the support of the Mission; but there are others who employ from forty to seventy hands, who pay only 25 dellars for the support of the Missiou. This is small doings for wealthy men. They are willing to have the preaching, but not to defray the expenses of the missionary. There is no arrangement ou the Mission for hoarding the missionary—cousequently we have to put up at the inn and pay a heavy board; we would prefer this Mesion to any appointment n the Alabama Conference it we had pleasaut boarding place. We have done ill in our power to procure a Missieur honse on the Missien, but did net sucodd. We have also tried to have an arrangement made to board the minister for another year, but have not yet suc- Genesce occided in this, although we still hope to Ohio carry this point. Wo hope that all these Illinois difficulties will seen be removed, and the hundreds and thousands of slaves in Liberia Mission these wealthy regions will hear the glad sound of the salvation.

We have of late been making some efforts to estublish a new Mission in the interier of the Cauebrake, and think the prospect good. It will be a mission of nuch importance and is quite remote from any regular preaching place. We hope an experienced manawill be sent to labor on it. The spiritual condition of the Arcola mission is good; there it uothing wanting to keep it good but meeting houses and money. A botter missionary of course would add much to its prosperity. As we will have some other things to speak of at Coufereuce, we will not write more at present.

The secular press is well sustained. The religious pupers are conducted with great ability. Zion's Herald, the organ of the New England Methodists, is published here. This is a spirited and well conducted sheet, under the editorial supervision of Rev. Abel Stevens, A. M. Mr. Stevens has hold his present relation to the paper for more than ten years during which time he has showed himself an able and successful editor. He writes with great case and power, and seldom fails in making an impression. His cditerials are always read, and the only complaint is that there are not more of llis independent amanuer of 1,202 treating cortain sahjects may not be added the mired by all, still the people of New 558 core speak out their sentiments in full, though they may not agree fully with all the sentiments expressed. He belonged to the republican party on this quistion; he sympathized as deeply with the aufferlos their lives in the late disastrous expedition later only. tginst Cuba; Redepented, he was a republican; he was for law and order, because a republic could not exist without law ond order.; a despotism might thus exist, but a republic could not. If a republic could not speak with a voice of law and order t was an government at all-it was an anarchy. The worst of despotisms is a government of absolutism-the wornt of governments.

Treaty stipulations were the supreme law of the land, and, if not observed, law was worth nothing. If Mr. John S. Trasher was not surrendered op, our Government ought to declare war ; but wr were great enough, powerful enough, strong esough, to go through with every legitimate formalily, to respect law and order, and to act conintently with their requisitions. The republican principle is for the people to make their own laws, and when made to carry them out.

He was opposed to the adoption of the proposed mendment, because it recommended opposition to law and order. He was confident that such e resolution could not be carried in such an assembly an Ilila.

[Crescant of Titursday.] Mr. Webster and the Spanish Question.—Accompanying the President's Mossage are very important and interesting documents from the Department of Statu.

SaThe principal ones are two exercing notes from the Spanish Minister, Calderon, and the reply of Mr. Webster, November 13. Calderon demands in warm terms reparation for the insults and out-rages upon the Spanish Consul at New Orleans, rages upon the Spanish Consul at New Orients, and for Spanish properly destroyed in Key West and New Orients, and expenses to the Spanish Rovernment, resulting from threats of a mob in appointment of a committee of three Senators to Mobile.

Alr. Webster sets forth the whole, history of the New Orleans troubles—and Mr. W. says the out-frages were "imjostifiable, disgraceful, and n llarages were "impostinance, disgraceful, and a lla-guant breach of duty." The Spunish Consul was visit to the United States, having received him under the protection of the laws of nations, and separately. He haded the same harms would be these outrages gave the United States Government paid in Kossuth as were paid in Infayette, and great pain. Mr. W. anys mobs, horeever, often, proposed the adoption of a similar course great plant. Revenue Uniter at Mobile.—The Mobile Advertiser publishes the following:

Tassurus Department. Nov. 25, 1831.

Sik—la reply to your inter on the subject of a Revenue Cutter at Mobile, I have to state that the Dupartment is fully awarn of the necessity of one upon that station, but the present number of outters renders it impossible to furnish one at this time. The Department has only recently been anabled to place one on the Charleston and Savainah stations, previous to while there was none on the Atlantic, south of the Chesapeake. Had the application to Congress for an appropriation to build four new outlers been successful at the last session, one of them was introduced for Mobile. The subject will again be brought to the attention of Googress, and the Department hopes with a more invorable result in which case it will have it in its power to place one at your port.

St. Louis Republican writer thus of a new disease which has made its appearance in Europe : which has made its appearance in Europe:

"A terrible and singular disease has just broken ont in Gallicia, which defice all the efforts of the snedical faculty to explain or enra. It is, an epidemic, and has received the name of the sleeping fever. The victim is auddenly seized, without any warning, with an irresistible desire to sleep; and this sleep lasts without Interruption, four, five and sometimes eight days, during which thee, sie sleeper gives no signs ok softering. When he finally awakes, fever conimettés—lasts from siteen to twanty hours, and ends in death. Two or three eminent French physiciens have just left for Poland, in order to study this new disease."

Extruordinary Feat .- The almost Herenlean t m walking one thousand miles in a thousand suc-cessive hours, has just been eclipsed by the accom-pletiment of the still greater seeming impossibility of walking a thousard nates in a thousand successive half-lears. The feat was performed on the Surrey Cricket Ground, Kensington Oval, England, by Richard Manks. Up to the very last mile, it was presumed that he would lait; so fearful were the seds against him, und so painful was his inceasant labor. His feet were blistered and covers with sores, and during a part of the time, it was with sifficulty that he could move his limbs; yet he accomplished the 1000th mile in seven minutes and forty seconds!

Falls of Niagoru.— The gross power of the Falls of Niagora is, according to Blackwell's observations, equal to that of nearly seven millions of borses; others, from different data, make it as high as ten or twelve millions, and even more. In fact, taking into account the aonstancy of its operation, the flort of this great estaract will bear a comparison with that of the entire adult laboring population on the lace of the globe.

Agrarionism .- A member of the Georgia Legis lature, in debating the bill of limitation, used the following language:

The following is an extract from the Report of the subject, by the "Committee on Literature :" Your Committee regard it as superfluous labor enlarge upon the superiority of this Dictionary; this is attested by the general circulation which this work has gained in this country, which is believal to be imprecedented for a work so expen-

" I hat this work is peculiarly valuable for Comnon Selfools is in the opinion of your Committee very uvident. There is no brench of knowledge in which it is so important that the 750,000 chil drenof this State who are taught in them should ho perfected as in the knowledge of their own language. There is no end 'so important #1 the eduexting of the common mind as to use this our com mon language with correctness, case and elegano and martain which we should make every possi ble (acilly readily accessible to all. And, in the oplished of your Committee, there is no one book which furnishes so many facilities for this purpose as Weisster's Unubridged Dictionary. The hab of referring to it will lead overy scholar to a knowledge of this mine of wealth intellectual; and as he imcovers its treasures, his mind will be en larged by the variety of knowledge which is con densed in the definitions of the familiar words h uses. The liablt of reflection too, will be mutured hy being employed on objects so entirely within his reach as the words, which he spells, and reads and uses in speech. If he be once taught the habit of reflecting on words, he will soon learn to reflecon the thoughts which these words represent." "A Dietianary is the last book withthe a richals ver wants to have abridged, the process being sure to cut off the very matter, which he most values." [Chronotype<sub>12]</sub>,

St. Peters-The Dome-Its or naments - Super. hund Petram .- Pius IX. smelling a Bouquet at Prayers STEAMER "VILLE DE MARSEILLES," } My dear M.—I reserved St. Peter's until I should have leisure to attempt thoughtfully a description of its sublime that ens could say, that is, tell the emotion which the eight of it produced upou my owa mind. The Washington Monu-Peter's on the pavement, and not touch the top of the ceiling of the dome; or two such towere as that of St. Patrick's in New Orleans; would scarcely reach to it—a distance from the pavement, inside, of 405 feet. The Roman Pantheon, which remaine in good preservation, is a round building, inside a rotuada supporting a dome; the diameter retunda is 143 feet, only 3 feet more than the diameter of the inside of the cupola of St. Petere. Michael Angelo declared when he began to superintend the building, that he would' the Panthson in the air." He more than fulfilled his promise, for the diametor of the outside of the oupola of St. Pster's is 195; feet, while the outside of the Paatheen measures in diameter only 163 feet. And nothing amid the ruins of ancicat Rome, no temple of Jupiter Tomas, or Coliscum indicate architsotural genius or power superior to that of the architect of St. Peter's. To my surprise I found the dome of St. Peter's not cae dome but three domes, oue over the other like the peels of nn onion, with * space of 6 or 10 feet between the outermost and the middle one, and 5 or 6 feet space between the middle and the innermest one. One might here ack what sort of piers are there to support such stupendous vaults? Sure enough; why four, cach of which is as large round as a meeting house. The cupola was the great idea with Michael Angelo and he made everything in the plan subsidiary and conformable to its effect. But certain men came after, who de-

Some cathedrals are so high, which entirely escaped my obser-crowded with statues and tombs and vation (1) though I thought myself lookpaintings and chapels, that one cannot see the huilding. Not so with St. Peters, whole day, upon every thing about the Thore is a large mass of wall and pilast building. But I have written enough the mind distinctly from everything in ture can not be adequately described, the honse: then the effect is coftened and I conclude with the fact that the and completed by the the rich items of annual wear and tear of the building sculpture, and medalion, and mosaic, and the cost of keeping it, are estimated painting, that are on every side.

There is but one oil painting in St. Peter's. That one is on elate, and represents the Fall of Simon Mague. There are, however, some twenty large and sisgant proportions; but I should have had more courage in the attempt had I made it after the first sight, for this more you see of that wonderful pile, and the more you reflect upon its mag. They are all of manufactured parts, the greater is your admiration for it, the less your ability to describe it less your ability to describe it fairly. # A Commentary Needed.

"A Commentary on the Scriptores is the great want of our Church in these times."

A great many huge masses of paper and leather may be found stored away in the libraries of most of our ministers, ia the libraries of most of our ministers, and a few of our wealthy members; but the many thousands of our families are destitute of a safe exposition, and, lsft but, as queer as we are, I guess we are in ignorance of our standard views, are sceking light through modiums that are far from Methodistic.

Our commentators have too frequently dwelt upon passages which need no labor, and have appended a vast amount of unnecessary (though generally good) composition to texts that are too plain to eccasion mistake, and too valuable to be buried up in a mass of human sng-gestions. We do not need a lamp where there is no darkness.

And in these times, when the people are surfeited with excess of pulpit labor, and when the country is flooded with published discourses, and cheap religious. manuals, it is not necessary, if it ever was, that nn exposition of the Bible should he either a bedy of divinity, after the olden time, or a book of homilies. We do not want a Christian Talmud. Wo want, what an appropriate title would naturally indicate—An Exposi-tion of the Bible. Let it be this and aothiag else.

Since the publication of our commenaries, great changes have taken place theological and ecclesiastical world. Old systoms have been set aside, or greatly modified, and new ones formed nneient errors revived, and new ones invented. all its excellences, (and thoy are neither few nor small,) has done us immense and irreparable injury in its expositiou of euch portions as the 24th chapter of Matthew, and the parallel places, where the judgment and coming of Christ is treated of. The crafty Universalist asks no better eport than to meet us on this subject, with Clarke's Commentary in his hand. Take, for a single specimen, the comment on the 27th verso of the 24th of Matthow, where, if the doctrine is taught in the Bible, the second personal advent of Christ ie predicted, and which serves, to some extent, as a key to the rest of the chapter. It can be demonstrated to perfection, and from the vory history there alluded to, that the whole statement about the entrance and march of the Romane from east to west is not only not correct, but false, totally, inexcusably false. And yot how important this statement of their marches in the eetimation of the expositor! It would seem to be eo necessary to this system of interpretation, that, without it, it would have been imposable for him to have proceeded. And how wide-spread, and how immutably storeotyped, that tremondoue historical error! It utterly destroys the force of the most plain and literal prediction of the eecond advent.

And even the almost inepired Watson hae blundered as badly, as any one oan see for himself, by coneulting his notes on that vorse, with his eye upon a map "All hastening from the Mediterranean coasts on the east to Jerusalem on tho west!" From a repeated and careful study of the hietory of the Jewish war, I am consider that an instance cannot be found of the Romane coming into the country from the east, or marching to a siego, or to h battle, in a westerly direc-The precise opposita was as penr ly true as the nature of the country

"We hope we shall pay expenses this esr, and are confident we shall do so, otwithstanding the diminution of the ucome, in consequence of excluding ad-ertisements. By this change we lest no thousand dollars, which we heped would be made up by an increase of our ubscription list; in this, hewever, we have been disappointed."

J. Wesley and High Churchmen.-It s common for high churchman, in this country as well as England, to hold up the founder of Methodism as a pattern to Methodists, in their own representaations of his attachment to the Estabishment. They are willing to garnish the tomb of Wesley, if thereby they can cast a slur on his followors. Most of the praise he gets from that quarter is due to the use that it can be put to. The Wesleyau," a Methodist weekly, published in Halifax, Nova Scotia, is culighteaing such admirers with a little knowledge of Wesloyan history which, from their late attacks upon his Church and brethren, the editor doems they

"Mr. Wesley acted independently of the Bishops in the Church of England. He formed societies, drew up rules for their direction, and governed them received money, appropriated it in building chapels, and to other religious and charitable purposes—raised up employed snd ordained ministers for Scotland, for America, and flually for England—used extempore prayer—appointed fasts—met his preachere in Annual Conferonce-and all this without consulting the Bishops of the English Church.

"Mr. Wesley denied the dogma of Apestolical succession—callad it 'a fale. which no man had proved, and which no man could prove; and in certain cases justified his people ia absenting themselves from the services of the Established Church.

"The Mothodists were driven from the Church of England - were de-nounced from the pulpit and through the press, as Papists, whilst all manner of evil was said of them falsoly for their religion's sako. Charles Wesley and sooros of mombers of society were rudely repelled from the sacramental table. The Church ministers generally took no pasteral oversight of the Mothodists, out in many instances oxcifed, headed and led on lawless mobs to persecuto and dostroy. A partial separation from the Church took place in Mr. Wesley's ifstime, which he could not, with all his influence, prevent, yet he acknowledged these persons and treated them as members of society. Thousands of his mem-hers never beloaged to the Establish lishment hy any religious act of their own. Such was the case before and afrovidence of God his followers were ed on step by step until thoy became a Church, possessing all the attributes and essential qualifications of a Church of Christ.'

On the Wing .- The Buffalo Ch. Advocate gives us the information below, which, if correct, justifies its consuro. We guess there must have been coms qualification in the original remarks of oemparatively unknown: On the death the speaker. Mr. Foster ie too sonsible a man, and too good a Mothodiet, to say

" At the late auniversary of the Mothodist Inetituto, at Concord, N. H., the Board of Trustoes and Visitors were addrossed by Rev. R. S. Foster, of Now York, on 'The Need of the Methodist ministry. Among the obstacles in the way of a high state of meatal oulture in their ministry, in the opinion of tho speaker, which ho chowed with a gooddeal of olearness, was their system of itinerancy. If this is not a bold piece of impudence on the part of a leading minister of the Church, we have not met with one of late. The itinerancy ie fundamental. Reslly, our educated men are on the wing."

The Westorn Christian Advocate gives an account of the opening of a new German Methodist Church ia Ciucinnsti, Ohio. We like much the interest manifested by our Northern brethren in this cause—copecially the effort which the Missionary Socretary consents to make in its behalf. We can but think they do not over-ostimate the imporance of this work. When will something of this cort be done for the thouand of Quemments thew Oriens? - had failed-they called for respite till they could recruit a little. Saturday night our missionary anniversary came off. Rov. C. Richardson gave us a very pretty and chasto missionary address ilo glanoed at the population of the carth—the numbers still in heathenism -the few-Christians compared with the teening millions of heathons.

I must forbear speaking further of his effort—it may see the light in time to come. Rev. O. Fisher brought up the rear with thrilling appeals in behalf of the cause. He threw his whole soul into the subject, giving It force and power. . The result of the anniversary was something like one hundred dollars The two speakers were made life mem bers of the paront society. Many of those who joined on proba tion last year, were subjects of grace this year, and many of those who united with us this year have been professors. leaving heen members of the Baptist, Presbyteriau and other denominations Mormons have rejected Joe Smith and shouted glory in the mercies of the Redeemor's kingdom. But few of the

We had considerable religious exer cise and much shouting at our revivals. Please permit me to relate a few simple circumstances. And first, let mo say to God belongs all the glory, for there was but little human instrumentality in this great work. Four is the number of our local preschers on this circuit; one of whom is supernumerary, though old onough to be superannuated, if such privileges were granted the local ministry. Another attended only one of the meetings from home; heace we had only two available preachers, viz: William Flynn and Wesley Burdyne. May the Lord reward them, for the Church can

At one of these revivals, every one who prayed for mourners, from Saturday evening till the close, get happy and at this and several others it was not uncommon for the sisters to become prostrato at the altar, and so remain a leugth of time, 'A Campbellito lady at one time was stricken down, and at the close of meeting was borae to the aext honso, hut about day dnwn shouted loudly, praising God, although sho was previously opposed to shouting. One of the mouruers, (a young man) oue moroing, started to the altar, running and leaping over the henches, embraced the exhorter, who was inviting seekers, and soou after experienced religiou.

Many of the above are valuable accessious; but enough of this, fer Bro. George Shueffer, my Presidleg Elder, dont like such distinctions. Much of our success is owing to the faithful laroors of Bro. Shaoffer, who gave nie an extra meeting, at which we succeeded in organizing a society of eighty mem-hers, to which twenty-five have been added since-making in all one hundred and five, where there was uo society iu the beginning of the year. I raise awaiteth our God in the building of this Zion.

·Bishop Paino comforted our hearts with hright views ou the subject of missions, at our anuivorsary meeting for this circuit, where $140 was collected, to be placed at the Bishop's disposal, for the California mission. Our missionary cellection will be about seven times as much as last year, and forty times the amouat collected year before last on this work. We regret that tho Coafereace cellection will uot amouat to our assessmoat quite, and the other collections will be much safatier than we could wish. Quarterage also will come out miaus; but we will "thank. God and take courage," and labor inv love as long as we can

In this population, as might he expected, are to be found nearly all charactors and complexions of human

Until recently, the village population have been in a state of nimost spiritual destitution. The result was, many who came here in the enjoyment of religion, completely backslid, and made common cause with the world. It is true, the ministers from the city would go down coessionally and preach, but for the want of a house to worship in their services were searcely available.

Year before last the Methodists commenced preaching here, and in the early part of last year obtained from Government the grant of a lot on which to creet a house of worship. The Episco-palinns and Catholies obtained a similar grant, about the same time; hut he for their huildings were hardly commenced, the Methodist Church was up, and a revival of religiou in progress. Many backsliders were reclaimed, and others converted, and n society was organized of about forty white memhors, including also a few blacks. Bosides this, the tide of popular feeling was turned in favor of the Methodists, so that the way was clearly opened for the propagation and establishment of vital religion. They now have a regular paytor stationed there; and wish the same next year.

Noble Conduct.—A correspondent of the Blai Commy (Pa.) Wing furnishes that maper with the particulars of the tollowing interesting incident which he was en'eye witness. It occurred a few years ago on the line of the great internal improvements of that State. It is one of these eccess of genuine kind heatcollers which tills the mind with the firvoluntary concutousness that there is "something of the angel still in our rommon neture."

At the point this side of the anominimin, when occurred the transhipment of passet gers from the West, was incored a round-boat, waiting the civil the train ere starting on as twy-through boat of the train ere starting on as twy-through boat of the train ere starting on as twy-through only west, was incored a round-boat, waiting the critical of the train ere starting of als knys through to be East. The cap am of the tout, a tall, rough, amendromed man, stood by his craft, supermooding the labors of his men, when the cais rolled appeared for the train of the tout, a tall, rough, and o from minutes after a party of about held and any of the labors of his men, when the cais rolled appeared for the train of the start of decision of the captain before engaging their pasage.

A moment more, and that decision was made known, as they beheld him coming from the sar with the siok man cradled in bis arms. Pushing directly through the crowd with his dying hardes, he ordered a mattress to be apread in the choicest part of the boat, where he laid tha invalid with all the care of a parent. That done, the captaio directed the boat to be prepared for starting.

But a new feeling seemed to possess the associated passengers—that of shame and court too at their inhumanity. With one common inspulse they walked abound the boet, and in a few hours alter, nnother committee was sent to the captain, carriesting his presence among the passengers in the cabin.

He weat, and from their midd there are a white-haired man, who with tear-draps starting in his eyes, fold that rough sau-embrowned mas that he hed taught their a lesson, that they felt humbled before him, and they asked his fogiveness. It was a touching scene. The fountain of true sympathy was broken up in the heart of nature, and ha waters welled up chobing the utterance of all present.

Now have kult the tie of solidity in the destinies of nations. I can not doubt that you know haw I was received by the public opinion in every country, which I touched since. I am fast, and what facilings my liberation has elicited in those coan the which it was not my let to touch. You know how I, a plais, poor, pensiless exile, have almost become a coatre of hope and confidence to the most different nations, not united but by the tie of common aufferings. What is the source of this apparent at it is, that your generous act of my the source of tits that you generous act of my the source of tits has been a state of the revelation of the fact that the United States are resolved not as allow the despois of the world for the revelation of the fact that the United States are resolved not as allow the despois of the world to trample on oppressed humanity. It is hence that my liberatioe in the most feerer my presence in Europe, now have unminously ited me: "Haute on—haute on to the great, free, rich acd powerful people. of the United States, and bring aver its brotherly and to the cause of your cocatry, so intimately generated with European liberty." And hers I shad to pleast the cause of the solidity of human rights before the great Republic of the United States. It was a most of the solidity of human rights before the great Republic of the United States. Why warrant to this capacity is writtee in the sympathy and confidence of all who are opportunity for a library and confidence of all who are opportunity for a library warrant as this capacity is written in the hope and appetitions of the world. I oring you shrotherly great has been proved. I oring you shrotherly great has harbunger of the public spirit of the people of England, united to pop him him her world. I oring you shrotherly fore, as it is united and recition to its Government, and which I witnessed, pronouncing the large of the public spirit of the people of England, united to you with calightened incoherly love, as it is united manner, openly, that the a wonder of the world. I have the most warm rish that the ster-spangled banner of the United hance may for ever be floating, whited and one, he could ensign of mankind's divina origin; and aking my ground upon this principle. On this historical hance has pround upon this principle of this floating, which I find lawfully existing, an enablished constructional fact, it is not to e party, but to the united ecopie of the United States, that I confidently will address my humble request for aid and protection to expense the unanity. I will conscientiously respect your lews, but within the limits of your lews, will use avery honest exertion to gain your operative sympastry and your financial; manatial and pullicel aid for my country's freedom and in dependence, and entreat the realization of these hopes which your generously has raised in me and in my people's breasts, and also in the breasts of Europe's cippressed nations. And, therefore, thirdly, I beg leeve frankly unstate that my aim is to restore my fesherland in the full cojbyment of that act of only rightful existing public lew of my matten, and have lost nothing of its rightfulness by the vident invasion of foreign Russien arms, and which, therefore, is fully entitled to be recognized by the people of the United States, whose very existence is tounded upon a similar declaration of Independence.

Thus, having expounded my oim, I beg leave to

Thus, having expounded my eim, I beg leave to state thet I came not to your gloritus abores to enjoy a heppy rest. I came not will the intention to gather triumnis of personal distinction, or to be the chject of populer shows; but I came an humble petitioner in my country's name, as lus freely chosen constitutional chief. What can be opposed to this recognition, which is a logical necessary conegoence of the principle of your country's political existence? What can be opposed to it? The frown of Mr. Hulsemann; the anger of that satellite of the Cast, called Francis Jose; hot Austita; and the immense danger with which some European and American papers threaten you, and by which, of course, you must feel extremely terriffied that your minister at Vienne, how you can combine the latting him sley there with your opinion of the cases of Hungary, I reelly don't know; hut so nor minister at Vienne, how you can combine the latting him sley there with your opinion of the cases of Hungary, I reelly don't know; hut so much I know, that the present ebolutia atmosphere of Europe is not very propitious. O Assorten principles. I know as man who could tell some currants facts about this matter. But as to Mr. Ruisemenn, really I don't believe thet he would be so ready to feave Washington. But as to Mr. Ruisemenn, really I don't believe the the would be so ready to feave Washington. But as to Mr. Ruisemenn, really I don't believe the the would be so ready to feave Washington. Hon. R. J. Walker of Liverpool,—On the 24th ult, some seventy of the principal merchents and genilemen of Liverpool, and the members of the American Clamber of Commerce, entertained Hom. R.-J. Welker, lete Successive of the Treasury of the United States, at dinner at the Adelphin Horel, in that town. Mr. Walker, says the socret to the participation by British ships in the cardidates for the Presidential Chair, and la fevorable to the participation by British ships in the carrying trede to California. To him also the British mercantile interests are indebted for the Introduction of the bonding system, end many smelloustons of the American tariff which have proved beneficial to British interests. W. Brown, Eag., M. P., was to have taken the chair, but trem indisposition was unable to attend, and Wm. Rathbone, Jr., Eeg., President of the American Commerce, officiested in his stead.

The Mayor of Liverpool, Thomas Littledale.
Eeg., the Earl of Derby and the Earl of Sesson, were deteined elsewhere by Illness or engagements. Among those present we find the names of T. L. Crittenden, U. S. Connil, Capial, Nye, of the Pacific steamer, Chi. Cot, etc. When the President came to the that of the evening—the health of their excellent guest—after paying a hardsome trihuic to that genilemen's distinguished talents and satemanike quelities, he concluded by proposing "R. J., Walker, to when both countries are edmuch indebted for his services to promete commerce, that great hond of union between the two branches of the Anglo-Saron smilly." Mr. Welker replied. It was not to him as an humble citizen, now without power end patronage enter, paid their honor that evening, but to the country and policy of the American Congress, and to her commercial freedom. The speaker thereon to the recommercial freedom. The speaker thereon to a series of statistics to prove that America, in reducing her teres more then one-lials, at the seme time doubled her isevance. Companing the high turiff of 1842 with the effect of the policy since-1846; he went on to say that intiles had been lowered 50 per cent; population had increased 191 per cent; tonnege 473 per cent; reitroads 452 per cent; and the official account of the first quester of the facel year, received by the steamer the slay previous, announced the surplus of 4,500,000. High tariffs redured the emount of exporte more than imports, excluding them from foreign ports.

In 1823, American imports doubled the present rate. Their commerce wes not geographic; it belonged to the world, and it was a chigular fact that America and England were the only nations whose receipts exceeded their expenditure. Equestrian States of Peter the Great.—This colbraied work of art is undoubtedly, take it for all in all, the most spirited, accurate end imposing of all the similar groups in the world. It was echieved by Falconet, a French sculptor of grant genius and reputation, who worked upon it, assisted by a large number of subordinetes, upwards of twelve yeers.
Queen Catherine II., at whose command the werk was underteken, gave Falconet thirty thousend pounds sterling upon its completion. The pedestat on which the group rests le one solid rock, on immense mass, weighing over fifteen hundred tons.
This enormous block of grenite was brought into Peteraburgh from a morass eine miles distant; fron hars were laid down, and cennon bells placed upon them, over which the mountainous ruck was rolled. The original dimensions of the stone were forty-two-fest-et the base, thirty-six at the top, twenty-one thick, and seventeen high. The face of Peter is extremely stilking, and 'is ceid to be a correct Illeness. The way in which the likeness was enught and preserved, is said to have been thus: During Peter's stay in France, in his youth, a French malden loved him, and heving a genius for art, she occupied some of their stolen houte in teking, a cast of his faca, a work of wonderful merit and fidelity. This Falconet saw, and modales hie setue after it. And there it stends tow, in the capitol-of the etupendous North, in the home of the guig-oous hut harberic Crers, alongside the great Russien Senate Chamber—atends there as the incarneted guardinn genitus of the young and plantic reelin which rose from savege chaos, and grew into consolideted despotism and portenious megnitude at the waving of his tremendous wand.

The artist, however, sacrificed considerable of the bulk to the prominence of his group. The Emperor and his steed are of colossal size, but finished even to the details, with life-like accuracy. The Czar is represented in an Asistic vost, and with his uncovered hrow crowned with laurel. His left hand grasps the reins, his right is stretched out in benedletton upon the people. He is mounting a steep precipica and trampling a serpent on the rock—types of the opposition and harbarism he overcame. The hore is high upreared on his hind legs, the vast weight of the statue being supposted by the Ingenious expedient of the full and flowing tail of the sited touching, the pedesual. There is nothing heavy or gravitating about the horse and his rider, but as you look on them you expect to see the gigantic and fiery courser leaf into the air and tread the fields of ether, like the fabled steeds of the sim. Faconet employed the most splendid, horsemen in Russ a, mounted on a magnificent barb, to dath swifily up a precipice and therefrear back and turn, for many days, while he was enged in this work, to secure spirit and truth.

Venice. Sept. '6, 1851 My-Drag M.: Here I am moong the Gor dans in this unique city, the far-famed mistress of the Adriatic-Venice. You approuch it ever a railway built for two miles in the shallow water which separates the secentytwo islands, on which Venice stands: from the main land, reminding one of the track which crosses the hoad waters of the Chesabridges in the city, and most of the houses have a had and a water door. I have not seen a carriage, or n wheel, or a denkey, or my animal larger than n dog, in the place. Every one moves about in boats, which glide no sound but the working and planting of the oar. PARIS CORRESPONDENCE. CHITTEDE OF M. BONACHEL DECISION OF STILE (RG) COURT OF FRANCE IN EVOID OF PROTESTANT WOR SORP PROTESTANT WORLD MANAZINE ON HADAX-GRSTPHADAN PROTESTANT O HURCH MISSIONARIES INVITAL

The President of the Republic is more than er at drawn swords with the Assembly lis election was favored in 1848 by the Le gitimists and the Orleanists, because they coped that he would be a mere tool in their ands. However, he has shown bluself to laye a will, and a very stubborn one for them, and he has raoved to be in some circumstances as much opposed to monarchy as to demagagy. Hence the bottod of the mass jority of the National Assembly against him. This fatred was under cover, so long as the President took their part against the Socialsts and the Red Republicans. But when he declared that, the law of the 31st May, restricting universal suffrage, should be re pealed; when he, dismissed his ministers (all belonging to the majority) hecause they would, not propose a new electoral law; when he chose his new Alhusters without the pale of the Assembly; when especially on the 4th of November, he declared in his noiseag ma must therefore exist no longer, nov

His party has been strengthened in the Assetuldy by the Republicans of all shades, who luce come to un agreement to vote on his sal suffrage. This explains the defeuts of the Parti de l'Ordre, us the Monarchists style themselves. They obtained a majority of three vetes only, on seven hundred voters, against the second realing of the electoral law-proposed by-the Ministers, immediately after the reading of the message; and a fewdays after, when the Questors proposed that the President of the Assembly might call out liberty.

A very different state of things prevails in the army whenever it thought proper, with out consulting the Minister of War, the profour. However, they do not consider themselves benten: They are continually on the look-out for some means of mmoving the President, and his Ministers cannot speak in the Assembly without being laughed at. Their lost effort has been to propose a law on the responsibility of the President and his Ministers. Should this law pass, which is very doubtful, the President could be impenched by any ten members of the Assembly, and i found guilty of lucying violated the Constitu-

Whilst the Assembly is in this state of turmoil, the people are as calm as ever. Many of the working classes care for less about politics than they did; and having found out that political agitations and revolutions take the bread out of their mouths, they do not seem in the least desirons of beginning ngain. The Cour de Cassation (the highest cour of justice in France) las decided in a fittorable sense a question of the highest importimee to religious liberty. Last February, Mr Lenoir, a Swiss minister of the diospel. was agrested for having (though a foreigner) celebrated Protestant worship in a Commun of the department of the Haute Vienne. Being condemned by the tribinal of Bellac he appealed before the Court of Appeal of Limoges, but the thet sentifie was confirmed. He then appealed to the Cour de Cussation, and was at last successful. 6th the 13th of November this court recersed the decision of the Court of Appeal, on the following grounds.

Foreigners residing in France cupey, as well as the French themselves, the right of professing their worshipt.

"Public meetings for religious worship when preceded by the formalities required by hiw: do not cease to be legal, by their he ing presided over by a minister who is a foreigner.

The prohibition by a Prefeet, of clubs and ther public meetings in a certain electoral circumscription, is not applicable to the above mentioned meetings, and should it be so upplied, the prohibition itself cannot be considered by the judicial authorities as regularly smed according to the terms of article 471. number 15, of the penal code.

"The prohibition of all exercise of pasts

ral functions in France, which is pronounced. by the law of Germinal, 10th year of the Ilepublic, against foreigners, is not applicable to the ministers of churches which receive no salary from the State."

This decision is of value on two accounts

First, it settles the jurisprodence on this question, which is of the utmost importance, us many of the ministers employed in France by the Methodists, and by Evangeheal Societies, are foreigners. Secondly, it may be considered as a sign that the uncreachinents of that the law in question was only temporary; Pepery are likely to receive a check, at least

Among those who have expressly written an the sublime. It is agreed that the most thrilling spectacle is one whose obscure out-line or rague presence at once suggests the line or regue presence at once suggests the peruatural. Of this sublime in terror the th of Job supplies an acknowledged instance:

A thing, too, was imparted to me secretly—lithe car received a whisper with II in tumuits of night visions.
When deep skeep fulls on men.
Easic came on me, and horror.
And the multitude of my based did abase.
A spirit passed before my based did abase.
The tood but it could not discorn its form.
A figure before mine eyes. leger mine eyes, be and I heard a voice r mortal be righteons before Gnd ! "" man be sure before his Maker ! ""

But perhaps the poetic beauty in which the bible anost excels all other books, is descripted of the world around us. A better idea the poetic unceptibility was never given, an when John Fortie alled it physiopathy, the facelly of pervading all nature with reasons being so as to have a perception, a fee magener in all things." 4 if you obtain a man of this etder, though his body a small thing, completely invested with a do dot, he extends his being in a francial around him. He feels as if he grew the grass and flowers, and groves; as if stood on worder distant mountain-top, consing with elouds or sublimely sporting that maged precipiees, saverné and seed and in the water-lilies frisks in the labes. NEW ORLEANS : Saturday Morning, December 27 EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE. My DEAR PRO TEM : I send you greeting

n the Editorial chair hope you may find it comfortable, and that you may use well your brief anthorite

The steamboat Georgetown, with a cleve rowd of pissengers, moved out of the horns of the Crescent lafe on Thursday evening the 18th. It was not long before I overheard ome such remarks as these pass between two fove. "Whit," said the older one, "do you take a book along with you?" "I always dot" replied the other. "I find such ocen what I never do," rejoined the first speaker "A book in such a place as this cubin is a use iess affair for me. Here, all around me, is book spread out. I study that. See ; every mnn is communicative now. This is a first rate opportunity to learn human nature."

This was a sensible hint, so I began volume, intent mon a few items for the readers of the Advocate. A singular-seeming personage had attracted my attention from the time of coming aboard. Be was walking with a most satisfied air up and down, ent ing some mellow upples. He wore a brown coat, which in dasky light one might mistake for broad-cloth: and homespan broad-cloth it was; short in the Isdy, long of tail, straightbreasted, burge-pocketed, and fustened with hooks and eyes. A broad-brimmed-exceeding broad-hat stuck low down and tenneiously upon his head. He seemed to be forty or tifty years old, in a good humor with every body and every thing. His physiognomy (for secause of the hat aforesaid I had no clew to his phrenology) presented a pleasing combination of generosity and common sense. 1 was open and intelligent-i fine subject plain to read and worth reading; what printers would call "long primer, leaded."

I longed for a talk with him, and was soo gratified: for he drew up a chair, blundly nquirjug: "Friend, how far up !" " Port ludson." . "Yea; I go further-to Louis ville." My new acquaintance was none other than Benjamin; or after the manner of this world. Benjamin Byrnin. "You are a Qunker. sir!" "Yea, friend: I belong to that des plsed few, called Quakers sometimes Sluk ing Quakers." ... What do you call yourselves ?" "The Believers : We believe in the Second Advent of Christ, that it is already past. When we speak of each other we say. The Believers in such or such a place."

Friend Benjamin had been a few days in New Orleans on business for the Believers who have a settlement at Pleasant Hill, Mercer county, Ky. He is a deacon or truslee. and had been disposing of garden-seed, sweelmeats, brooms, cedar-ware, and a few other articles at making which his brethren have a great name. In return, he was taking back to the "Believers in Pleasant Hill," sugar and coffee, some first-rate mackerel, ote.; evidences. with his own double-chin, that the community sforesid, notwithstanding their spiritual

As the people, of whom I take Friend Ben jamin to be a fair exponent, beth in principle and practice, are singular, and of some liter est in the world. I propose to give you some account of them, as I received it from him. The Shakers or Shaking Quakers, are very different community from the Penn Quakers. Friend, Benjamin dld not hesitate say of these name-sakes, that they were as much out of the way, as I was, and both they und I were following Adam. They receive the Bible, the whole Bible as we do, and profess to understand it better; for they profees to have the Spirit in which it was written Friend B. declared he understood it perfectly, very word and sentence, from Genesis to Re velations He confessed, however, in answer to a direct question, that he did not read it very often-may be, not once a month. His quotations showed as much. "Ann Lee, of Manchester, England, came to the United States in 1774. Revelations were made by her in the Old World, but there she gathered no Church. In her, the Shakers believe that the Christ appeared a second time as he appeared in Jesus the first. " What is written in Revelations, chap, xii., they upply to Mother Lee. This country is the "wilderness" whither the "woman" fled, and

We dance to the song. It was the involuntary emotion caused by this. thich led the world in derision to call us Shakers." Why do not those in our churches who presume to bring forth Scripture testinony for their reols, waltzes, and cotillions, go the full figure with friend Benjumin? As might be expected, all persons who are empted to the experiment, cannot abide this ort of life. Friend Benjamin, said that nore had left them than now remain with them. It must be so. It is not possible fer very body to be good naturedly eracked. Discerning of spirits is one of the gifts still luimed by this community. , When I asked my friend to describe to me the appearance of those heavenly messengers by whom they received their revelutions, he shook his head nd said that was not lawful to do so out of the sciety. California Missionary Operations.

On the 10th of January Bishop Paine excets those Missionaries that are ready to sail or California. He-will be here at that time. We have some intimation that Dr. Schon, the Missionary Secrebary, will also be in the city on the occasion. The California Christian Advocate-a most infleresting Methodist paper, published in San Francisco-is before us. The last number. Nov. 13, thus, discourses:

"The Missionary operations of the different Charches represented in Cantorna were tar-dily commenced, but singularly fortunate in most instances in the character and enterpuise of the laborers selected, and have been pros-ceuted with much ability. But the slowness of the Boards at home, and the tardy supplies of men furnished, has excited our wonder— our astonishment. Often have we had to neck our impetacus exclumutions of surprise and mortification, as steamer after steamer arrived, without a Missionary, or notice of ich or unswer to the call. It has been, probably, impossible for the f contradictions in herself, so new, so gigunde, that none at a distance can comprehend the field. Like u rainbow spanning the whole heavens, perfect at birth, California sprung at neavens, periest itt artif, California sprang at once into greatness: Men looked to see the glowing colors fade. They seemed instinctively to say, such a wouder cannot last. But when they saw the cloud abiding, the constantly falling drops, the mingled sunshine, and the increasing glow and blending colors, they knew not what sign would next appear in these heavens. It was alleged in the Report that the Bible was God's bed gift to man. At the suggestion of the Winans; this clause was soberly abated by an amendment. The Bible might be the second best, but the Saviour must ever be neknowledged as the best gift of God to man Again; the Report presented the Bilde Solety as the best organization of man under he sur. This pre-eminence was challenged for the Church'exclusively; though the Bible Society was admitted to be the second best, or one of the best." Thus amended, the Prenulde and Resolutions were adopted. This scrutiny of reports is worthy of all commendation. Those who pass on every thing lut is offered in ship-shape, listlessly and hurriedly, will do nothing they resolve to do. ind often commit themselves and the Church. formally, to the most pernicious errors.

On the subject of the Bilde, the Conference ccommended the Rev. R. Abbey as an ngent to travel in its bounds. "He appeared before the Conference and make a few appropriate and feeling remarks: About the 25th of January, or soon after, he will (D. V.) be ready to sail for Culifornia. Meantime collections will be taken up for the $1000, without delay. The amount can easily be raised.

The Conference took immediate steps to wards eaising the amount. A collection was taken in the Conference room-preachers and spectators contributing to the sum of $70.

Many amendments were made and much earnest discussion ensued upon the introduction of the California resolutions; but the result seemed to be a very general appreciation of the work, and a hearty disposition to

The Los-Angelos Star atates that forty-four

The Los-Angelos Star states that forty-four homloides have been committed in that county within the last fifteen months, and that with a very few exceptious the perpetrators of the murders remain undiscovered. But one person has been tried for murder since the County was organized, and he was acquitted.

A correspondent of the Transcript, writing from Georgetown, gives nn account of the nur-der of a Mr. Robert Woolridge, from Kentucky, at a house of Ill-fame in that place. The perpetrator of the deed is a Peruvian, and is said to have killed three or four others previously.

nal says:

The "prefessionals" are now, and have been for some time, doing a flourishing business, not only in the "mining towns," but all over the Southern mines. Instead of waiting in San Francisco for the miners to bring the guld to them, as formerly, they now go to the miners, and are as faithful in making their circuit, and butter as the prints on action relating to the market in white on action relating the contract of the miners. and are as fallful in making their circuit, and visiting certain points on certain nights, as are the most scalous of the litherant preachers in performing their stated tours in the East. Mounted on mules, with saddle-begs full of "big dollars" and a few packs of monte eards, a certain class of gamblers are constantly traveling in the nature, visiting every camp where there is a possibility of getting a bet-keeping a flating look-out, of course, for rich leads, new diggings and "soft snaps." Most of thein have their regalar, customers—hard-working men wine and "soft snaps." Most of them have their regular customers—hard-working men who "buck off" every dollar, with the hope, some time or other, of "breaking a bank." Many of these gamblers are disappointed miners, mem-who stood well at home, but who, either-through laxiness, -inability to work, or ill-luck, have not realized their expectations in mining. Most of them are wild and reckless, but many are close, shrewd and calculating men, who, us long as they can make money, have few scruplee as to the means. We must say, withat, that some of them act with principle and honor in the ordinary transactions of life.

The vice of gambling has now become so great a passion with some man in Childrenia, and a very large clase, too, that they will never profit by experience.

A Quist war of Settling a Dispute.—Que of the neatest things lu-lts way that we over heard of, came off yesterday on Long Wharf. It seems that a party of fanr persons were spending the Sunday quietly in playing all-fours. One of the parties, however, not content with the chances of the geine, and determined to chain the fickle goddess to his side, established a kind of telegraph with his partner, by laying his hand extending his fangers, designating very intelligibly the number of trumps which he held. The device was ingenious and highly successful, for a while, but was unfortunately discovered by one of the opponents, who, on a repetition of the offence, very dexterously whipped out a bowie knife and cut off two fingers! The unfortunate hombre screamed with pain, and having picked up his straups, rushed from the room, what his reasons were for such conduct, when he quietly replied, "It was a fortunate thing for your friend that he had no more trumps, or he certainly would have walked off with fewer fingers." Cool that!

THE CALIFORNIA INICANS.—The San Francisco Hierald coulding the following interesting infor-mation in regard to the Indian tribes, cummunicated by Major Savage and Capt. Vine er, two of the oldest settlers in California, who arrived in the city from their trading post in he ladian Reservation on the Fresno:

the Indian Reservation on the Freeno:

These gentlemen say that there are several thousand Indians on the reservation; many of them with risles, and some thirty with Colte largest sized dragoon pictols, which they handle with considerable dexterity. These have been sold to these by some raccelly whites, against the percentage of the Commissioners, and at the risk of secrificing the lives of hundrads of our citizens. A cortion of the whites.

States do not feed them they will go to war; but if they are supplied with enough to eat they will continue quiet as long as it lasts. They do not want any harm to come to him and his party, so they went to work end hullt him a strong fort, into which he milght safely retire in case of accidents.

Ile given it as his deliberate opinion thet ten thousand indians will be in urms this winter, unless they are supplied with food; and if oace they betake themselves to the mountains, it will be impossible to dislodge them.

The whites are eneronehing upon the reservation, despite the terms of the treaty. This gives the Indians an excuse for breaking it on their side.

There is a post on the upper San Joaquin, in the reservation, at which a small detachment of United States troops are stationed. Itree, also, are seven stores which trade with the Indians. The gold mines are not worth working to the whites, but the Indians manage to dig enough to obtain the few articles they need.

The state of things existing in the reservation demands a lease with reasons.

enough to obtain the few articles they need.

The state of things existing in the reservation demands e large reinforcement of United States typops to keep the Indians in check, but it is to be feared not a soldler can be spared from the forts of the East to protect us. We are left to our own resources, and inust perforce rely upon them.

Rio. Granne City, Dec. 1, 1851.

A gentleman has just arrived from Carvajal's camp at Carralvo, and brings the news that the liberator's have succeeded in forcing Janregui's troops to a single house, near the outskirts of the town, where they remain cooped up, without provisions for men or hopses. On the night of the 24th ult. Carvajal arrived l'unta Aguda, five leagues from Mier, with men and animals tired down, and almost desputring of overtaking Jauregui, whose evident intention was to retrea to Mouterey withouth fight. The next morning, before daybreak, Carvajal abandoned all his language at Punta Aguda, and taking through the chaparral, he turned Cerralvo, and came out into the road about five leagues above that place, thus placing himself between Jauregui and Monterey, and forcing the mochos to fight him. Carvajal received a communication from the nicalde of Cerralvo, begging him not to fight Jauregui in de town. To this Geu. C. returned an answer, stating that his wishes coincided with the desire of the alcaldo, and hoped that Jauregui would give him a field fight. This the latter relused to do, however, and commenced fortifying the town by taking possession of the houses and carting loopholes in every direction. His two pleces a cannon were also advantageously posted.

His two pleased cannon were also advantage ously posted.

When Carvajal's forces advanced to the attack uot a Mexican soldier was to be seen. All were rangly ensonoed lusido of the houses on all the streats-leading to the plane. To this place they were soon driven in, and it cost Carvajal two days hard fighting to drive them out of this stroughold. He finally succeeded in getting possession of all the houses in and around the plana, except the eatherlar, where a stroug force was concentrated. The was surrounded by a low stone wall, inside of whilch was the principal portion of the Mexican soldiers and their Indian auxillaries. A general rush was now made by Cervajal's men against the cathedral, and they leaped the wall, musket in hand, pell mell, most of them landing hend first in the middle of their enemies. The latter were soon flying in every direction, and Jauregni finally took roluge in a large stone-building, formerly occupied during the American war as a quartermastor a depot and the United States of the two, and had taken all Jauregu's train, provisions, amunition, etc. Jauregu's train, which the gan succeed in beating them, and get possession of the cannou, he can march into Montorey without opposition yesterday morning, and if he gan succeed in beating them, and get possession of the cannou, he can march into Montorey without opposition, as a gentleman, who left there on the 24th, informed me that there was not a soldier left in town. Gen. Uraga still remains at Camargo, with about 500 men, principally infantry. About 400 of his cavalry have marched for Cervalvo by the Aldeuas road, and it is possible that Jauregui may be cuahled to retain his position and the law after my linear provisions of the cannou, he can march into Montorey without opposition of the delease road, and wounded, among the former Captain Chinn and Lieut. Graham, and among the latter Col. Wheat, who was severely wounded in the arm while icading the desperate charge upen the oathedral. The loss of the enemy is not known with certainty, but must have been very great. Most of the Seminole Indiana have been killed, including their leader. Jauregul had aline artilierymen killed, end their captain was wounded and taken prisoner. He was treated with great consideration and kindaces.

Gen. Harney left here this morning for Roma, intending to visit a few of the places alove here, and station troops wherever they may be necessary to preserve the neutrality laws. I am informed that he has sent to Browasville for two companies, one to be stationed at Edinburgh, apposite lleynosa, and the other at Homa.

unusual in legislation. He defended himself against any imputation of having at the session of 1850 delayed the action of having at the session of 1850 delayed the action of the Senate on the fugitive slave bill.

Only three Senators from the Northern States had voted for that bill—the two from lowa, and Mr. Stargeen, of Pennsylvania. Why, he asked, were the northern allies of the Senator from Mississippi, the compremise men, absent on that vate? He rend his report on the President's Message usking for amendment of laws to enable him to execute the Fugltive Slave law, and repeated his views. He was opposed to clothing the President with the power to call out an armed milita to enforce a law with bayquet and ball. Thought that request an oxidious one. He did not believe the law would be executed. The charge of treason had falled. Those who resisted the law would now be turned over to State courts and State juries, with sympathies end feelings like those whom they were to try. Even if convictions took place, no Northern Executive would hesitate to pardon them.

The Senator from Mississippi votel egainet two of the measures; he denounced the admission of California as an outrage and as without precedent; now he says California wes admitted as other State. He traced the needing of Southern Congressien, and the edoption of the Southern Address, as proceeding a logetice from the Senator from Mississippi. The Nashellle Convention was, to a great extent, the result of that Senator's nevemonts. He asked the Senator from Mississippi. The Nashellle Convention to divide Mississippi. He filluded to the internal etruggle in South Carolina, and sald that the position assumed by the Legislature of that State was the result of movements made in Mississippi.

Mr. Foote repeated his coudemnation of those persons who, in South Carolina, had recommended war upon the U. S. ports. He then took up the several acts of the Compromise, and contended that the act admitting California was unconstitutional. That the Excentive had appointed Judges and Marshais for the territories, who were pledged in favor of the existence of Mexican laws abolishing slavery, and that out of a vast territory, sufficient to form 48 States as large as Ohio, the South had been utterly and forever excluded. He had not concluded when the Seinte adjourned.
